Spring in Washington Also the Electric Chair Still Hoover and Smith Gambling and Crime

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7—Beautiful weather, lovely flowers, wide streets nearly empty, southern calm, nobody in a hurry. Such is Washington with Congress gone home, and all eyes turned toward Kansas City.

The President leaves for the Wisconsin fishing grounds next week, and has work on his mind. There will be 38 persons in his party, the largest working force ever assigned to the President.

Some, mistaken, say this means that the President will be active politically. If that were true, one good secretary and one telephone would be enough equipment.

The President intends to keep up with his work as though he were in Washington, and will work every day except Saturday.

The execution of three young men, sentenced to die tomorrow in Washington's new electric chair, is now postponed until June 22, that the President may have time to consider a petition for clemency.

The three condemned, all young, convicted of killing a policeman, "showed no emotion when death was postponed." That absence of emotion made it easy for them to commit the murder.

Washington, capital of a nation, supposed to be civilized, should have abolished the death penalty, thus setting an example to the 48 States, instead of purchasing a new electric chair.

The political situation, so far as the Republicans are concerned, is settled, except that a minority, evidently with its own good reasons, is trying, at the last minute, to defeat Herbert Hoover.

Today one Washington editor even tried to convince himself that Gen. Pershing would step to the front, radiant in the glory of war, and take the nomination for himself.

Anything can happen, since the public does not see the hands that pull the strings. But, in Washington as elsewhere, it looks more than ever like Smith and Hoover.

A survey by the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice, partly financed by the Carnegie Foundation, says gambling, thoroughly organized for many years, plays a great part in Chicago crime problem.

Gambling is literally the worst of vices, most dangerous to those that practice it, and to the community on whom they prey.

Those that promoted a revival of Chicago race tracks are responsible, whether they know it or not, for much of Chicago's crime.

It is hard to escape the crime wave these days. In one case bandits kidnaped a doctor, ordered him to treat one of them wounded, then beat him cruelly and finally killed him.

Six active bandits in New York city rounded up four taxi drivers among their victims.

Taxicabs are associated with banditry in the public mind. The policeman "meaning it all for the best" shot down two of the innocent taxi men, killing one, knocked a third unconscious with his club.

It may become necessary to do something about our crime wave. Senator Capper's interesting weekly, read by a million and a half prosperous farmers, says

SECRET LOVE TRYSTS AND FEARS OF SLAIN GIRL BARED ON STAND

Raising his voice to a shout, Frederick Hinman Knowlton, Framingham business man, denied today in Middlesex Superior Court, where he is on trial for murder, that he killed Marguerite Isabelle Stewart, supervisor in the Beverly School for Deaf and Dumb.

His shrill, "I did not" rang even through the courthouse corridors, despite the closed doors.

With the cry came the end of direct examination by his counsel, John D. Driscoll.

Under questioning by his counsel, Knowlton traced his movements on the day before Miss Stewart is sup-

GIRL FLIERS ARE AGAIN DELAYED BY WEATHER

Unsatisfactory weather conditions again delayed the start of the transatlantic fliers today.

At Trepassey Bay, N. F., Miss Amelia Earhart and her two flying mates in the monoplane Friendship were awaiting a change in the wind and a lifting of a fog. Her air companions are Wilmer Stultz, pilot, and Low Gordon, mechanic, and all three members of the crew are impatient to be off.

The same conditions holding back the fliers at Trepassey also balked the plans of Miss Mabel Boll and her crew at Roosevelt Field, N. Y. Miss Boll is eager to start for Europe in the plane Columbia with Capt. O. C. Boutilier as pilot and Arthur Argles as navigator.

Indications this afternoon were that neither the Earhart nor Boll plane would be able to start until tomorrow morning at the earliest.

As the eastern sky took on a tinge of dull grey early today the great monoplane Friendship could

FINAL TREMONT TRUST PAYMENT FOR SAVERS

Judge Carroll of Supreme Court today authorized Bank Commissioner Hovey to pay on June 25 a final dividend of 3 1-3 per cent to savings depositors in the Tremont Trust Company. Depositors have previously received 96 2-3 per cent of their claims. Judge Carroll was told that after all claims against the savings and commercial departments had been paid any balance remaining would be distributed pro rata among depositors in both departments of the bank. In this case, however, it was said commercial depositors would not receive more than 50 per cent, and therefore savings depositors would not get any interest.

HARD-HITTING TRIBE DEFEATS PIRATES

Braves Field, June 8—The battling Braves batted their way to a win over the Pirates here today. Rogers Hornsby put the game on ice when he hit his 10th homer of the season in the fifth inning, scoring Sisler ahead of him. Ed Brandt held the Pittsburgh team well in check.

Score—Braves 9, Pirates 5.

FIRST INNING

Pirates—L Waner walked. Bartell flied to Richbourg. P. Waner hit into a double play, Farrell to Sisler. NO RUNS.

Braves—Richbourg beat out a bunt to Hemsley and went to second on Hemsley's bad throw. Richbourg took third on a wild pitch. Moore's sacrifice fly to P. Waner scored Richbourg. Bartell tossed out Sisler. Hornsby walked. Bell singled. J. Smith singled, scoring Hornsby. On an attempted double steal, Bell was out, Hemsley to Traynor. TWO RUNS.

SECOND INNING

Mrs. Margaret Mahan, mother of Mary C. Mahan, slain South Boston singer, collapsed today in Quincy Court during the arraignment of John Tartar, South End taxi driver, who is charged with murder of the girl.

A description of her daughter's death wounds during the examination of Medical Examiner Fred Jones of Quincy proved too much for the anguished mother and she slumped in her seat, sobbing hysterically.

HARVARD STUDENT FINED $120 ON AUTO CHARGES

Fines totaling $120 and a suspended sentence of six months in the House of Correction were imposed today in Waltham Court on George B. Clothier of Holyoke st., Cambridge, student of the Harvard Law School. Clothier, whose home is in Winnewood, Pa., pleaded guilty to charges of drunkenness, driving while under the influence of liquor, going away after an accident without making identity known, and having a loaded revolver in his automobile. The drunkenness charge was placed on file. Clothier was arrested at the end of a chase after his car had struck another in Watertown sq., Watertown, last May 19.

SOUTHERN CROSS NEAR BRISBANE, AUSTRALIA, AFTER STORMY BATTLE

Honolulu, T. H., June 8 (INS)—Less than 500 miles from Brisbane, goal of its transpacific flight linking North America with Australia, the giant tri-motored monoplane Southern Cross toady was speeding along on schedule after a terrific battle in a storm of rain, headwinds, bumps and gales that caused the ship to drop suddenly 400 feet at times.

A radio message direct from the plane picked up by Radio Corporation gave the position of the plane at 3 a. m., Suva time (June 9), as "latitude 25.31 south, longitude 160.13 east, 408 miles from Brisbane."

On the basis of this report the plane should reach Brisbane between noon and 1 p. m., Pacific coast time, today. This means 5 to 6 p. m. Boston daylight saving time.

The giant tri-motored Fokker hopped off at 2:52 p. m. yesterday from Naselai on the third lap of the 7800-mile flight from Oakland, Cal., to Sydney, Australia. More than 5550 posed to have died, and traced them on the fatal day, also, hour by hour.

Mabel Boll, "Queen of Diamonds," with Charles A. Levine and Navigator Arthur Argles at Roosevelt Field just before the unsuccessful start of the plane Columbia to Old Orchard, Me., on the first leg of Miss Boll's proposed transatlantic hop, are shown at left. Fog forced the plane back. She's ready to try it again at first favorable moment.

According to his testimony, he was either engaged in details connected with his business or was at home.

TELLS OF HER "FEAR"

Frankly, the Framingham married man detailed to the crowded courtroom incidents of many automobile rides with the Stewart girl.

The relations, he admitted, were decidedly affectionate and they declared their love for each other. He denied he had ever quarreled with her.

Only a few weeks before her body was found, Marguerite told him, he said, that she was in fear of her brother because she had refused his demand to treat with a surgeon.

Because of her refusal, her brother had threatened to inform the Beverly school authorities, she told Knowlton, he testified, and had even gone to Beverly and repeated his threat.

Beginning his testimony, Knowlton said he was born in Worcester. When he was a year old his parents moved to Framingham. He is now 36.

TELLS OF LOVE.

Ht testified that he was married in 1916 at Ashland and is the father of one child.

In 1920, when he was a night school teacher and Marguerite Stewart was a night school student, he met her at his father's business school in Framingham.

They had several meetings in 1920, Knowlton testified, but there was nothing wrong then in their relations. Then came a lapse until 1927, the girl dropping out of his sight. In 1927 he met her accidentally in a Northboro drug store, he said.

"We talked," testified Knowlton, "and then she went out with me and got into my car. We drove to Green Hill Park in Worcester. That was in July.

"In the middle of November, 1927, I received a letter from her saying that she was working in Beverly at a school and was lonesome. She wrote that she did not know anybody in town and asked if I would meet her on her night off.

TRYSTS SECRET

"I received a second letter a week later, asking me to meet her in Boston. I never answered by mail, always by telephone.

"After I met her, we had something to eat and I drove her back to Beverly.

"I always left her on the corner of the street in which the school was located. She said she was afraid someone would get the registration number and find out that she had been out with a married man.

"The next time I met her was last December at the Framingham railroad station, just after 8 o'clock. That night I drove her back to Beverly, but in Revere we stopped for a while.

"The next time I saw her was just before Christmas in Boston. I drove her back to Beverly, but I don't remember whether we stopped on that trip.

"On January 12 I met her in Boston and took her back to Beverly, stopping on the way in Lynn.

"In the middle of February, I met her again in Boston, but then I did not see her again until March, when we went to a lunch room.

"While eating she became ill. We got into the automobile and drove to the Revere Beach boulevard, where we stopped until she revived.

"She told me then that her brother, Gordon, had got her in trouble again. She said she had lived in his home for two weeks prior to going to Beverly.

"Her brother was angry. She said she was afraid of him.

"Gordon insisted that if she did not do what he wished, he would make trouble for her at the school.

Knowlton testified he next heard from the girl on March 29 when he telephoned her from Natick, after receiving a letter. The letter begged that he meet her in Boston.

Instead, he met her in Framingham at 8:15 p. m. Later that night, he said, he drove her to Beverly, reaching there at approximately 10:30 p. m. After that he never saw her again, according to his testimony.

During the ride to Beverly that night, Knowlton said, she told him again that her brother had threatened to expose her.

Knowlton said he arrived home between 12 and 12:30 o'clock and met a man named McGrath, occupant of the second-floor suite, in the hallway and that they conversed for a minute.

TRACES HIS ACTS

Tracing his movements on the following day, the day on which Marguerite Stewart is alleged to have been slain, Knowlton said he arrived at his shop shortly before 8 a. m. and spent most of the morning there with his assistant, Clarence Rhodes.

At 11:15 Knowlton said he drove to the home of his wife's mother in Ashland, taking two jugs with him. The jugs, he explained, were to bring back water, as the water in Framingham was "bad."

"Do you know if the water is still bad there?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he answered. "I haven't been there for two months."

Leaving his mother-in-law's home at 11:40, Knowlton drove to the home of Mel Fellows in Ashland, he said, picked up a battery and went back to the store. Clerk Rhodes then went to lunch, returning at 2 o'clock. Knowlton went to lunch and was out not more than 25 minutes, he claimed.

Dropping in first at the shop, he rode to his home and found his wife and aunt there. After a short visit, he returned to the shop at 3 p. m., and started at 3:15 for Sherborn to collect a bill of $52 from a man named Johnson.

On the way, his car was forced off the road by another vehicle and got stuck in mud for a time, he said. At the Johnson home he was unable to get in.

SLEPT IN CHAIR

Knowlton said he then drove to Sherborn Center and spoke to a man friend and was back at his shop at 4 p. m. He talked with a man in the shop until 4:45, while Rhodes was present.

At 5:15 Knowlton drove home again and took his aunt from his home to the Hotel Kendall in Framingham, then returned to the battery shop where Rhodes and his uncle were, he said.

Fifteen minutes later, he drove home to supper, arriving before 6 o'clock, and ate with his wife, he testified. An hour later, he drove back to town and called at several stores, among them Kerwin's and the Rice pharmacy. Then he went home, arriving about 7:30 to find a Miss McKenzie with his wife. For the rest of the evening, until he went to bed, he was asleep in a chair, he testified.

G. B. S., "Speed Bug," Always Breaks Law as Driver

Harrowgate, Eng., June 8 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw revealed himself as a speed bug and a habitual lawbreaker to the Chief Constables Association, which is in session here today. The dramatist confessed that in 20 years of motoring he had never driven without breaking the law. "I hope nothing I say will be held against me," said Shaw, who added that he had been prosecuted only once—for driving 27 miles an hour—that he was lucky at that for just previously he had been going 50 miles.

MOTHER OF SLAIN MAHAN GIRL COLLAPSES IN COURTROOM

Tartar refused to waive lower court examination after his surrender to Boston police last night when he learned he was wanted for the murder.

Mrs. Mahan braved the ordeal of details until "Bullet No. 4," described as the death bullet, was placed in evidence. With a low moan, that grew into loud cries, she wilted in the arms of her 17-year-old daughter, Agnes.

Her son, Thomas, and the daughter led her from the room.

Edwin Mahan, brother of the dead girl, told of a talk with Tartar in the Mahan home two days before her body was found.

"If she doesn't mind me and do what I tell her, I'll kill her," he quoted Tartar as saying. John Mahan, father of the girl, was also present, he said.

"Mary did love him until about six months ago," he said in response to a question. Edwin was the last of the girl's family to see her alive, he testified, waving to her as she started the death ride.

Dist. Atty. Wilfred Wilbar questioned Dr. Jones about the bullet wounds, nine in number. It was brought out that several contusions were found on the neck, chest and shoulders, indicating an intense struggle before death.

"Pullet No. 4" passed through the left part of the back, pierced the heart and punctured the lungs before it lodged under the skin of the girl's breast, Dr. Jones said.

The shot that followed might also have caused death, he said, as it severed the spinal cord.

Judge Albert Avery found probable cause and ordered Tartar held in Dedham jail without bail for the September grand jury.

be made out rocking at its moorings in Trepassey harbor.

The Friendship is ready for the great adventure, and the fliers can leave on a moment's notice, providing they can get the plane into the air. Three times yesterday they tried it, after bidding goodby to the handful of onlookers on shore, and three times it was too heavy to rise, Stultz said later on returning to this village.

Its great gasoline tanks are filled and the provisions are aboard. The first favorable sign should see the fliers at the controls and the plane in the air, the fliers announced.

Stultz said that a brisk breeze is needed to enable the Friendship to rise from the water. The wind was too light on the three attempted takeoffs yesterday, and persons in Trepassey interested in the flight believe that today's light winds are insufficient to meet the requirements.

PLANE WEIGHS 6 TONS

The tanks of the Friendship carry 900 gallons of gasoline. This makes the plane's weight six tons when loaded.

Having, since arrival at Trepassey, discovered on two suceeding days two separate leaks in the tanks, Gordon said that just prior to the hopoff he will make a thorough inspection to make certain that everything is shipshape. He believes, however, that with the repairs to the second leak everything is O. K.

It is hinted, Roosevelt Field reports state, that there is a slight difference of opinion among the Columbia's crew. This difference, however, is not serious enough, it is believed, to bring about any change in the personnel.

But it is known that Capt. Boutillier, Miss Boll's pilot, is all for a non-stop flight to Europe from New York, with no halt at Old Orchard, while Miss Boll and Argles, relying on the advice of Charles A. Levine, are all for stopping at Old Orchard and fueling up there. Gasoline has already been sent to Old Orchard and reservations made there at the Hotel Brunswick.

Girl Flier, Disappointed at Delay, Wires Mother

Keen disappointment over failure to get into the air at Trepassey Bay for her transatlantic flight was expressed today in a telegram from Amelia Earhart to her mother and sister in Medford.

A short time after the telegram was received, the sister, Muriel, started for school, asking newspapermen on the way if Amelia had hopped off yet today.

Meanwhile, the mother tuned in on her radio, seeking principally news flashes that would tell her if Amelia had headed into the East for Europe.

"I am hoping and praying," said the mother today, "that my girl and her companions will succeed in their flight. Everyone tells me that theirs is the safest and most practical plane used in water trips so far.

"That is comforting, and I really am not worrying at all."

STATE HOUSE RUM REPORT MAY BE FILED TODAY

The Howard report on charges that confiscated liquor was taken from the State House by officials was to be filed late today or early tomorrow with Senator Hugh Gregg, chairman of the legislative investigating committee.

While the question of making the report public will be determined by Chairman Gregg, it was rumored around the State House it did not sustain the charges.

'BEST AIRPORT FOR LOWELL'—MRS. ROGERS

Lowell, June 8—"After the aeronautical exposition to be conducted in Lowell the latter part of this month I hope the aeronautical industry will be attracted to this city," said Congresswoman Edith N. Rogers today at a luncheon given to New England newspapermen at the informal opening of the new airport.

"We believe that Lowell's new airport is the second best in New England now, being exceeded only by that at Hartford, Ct., and we hope to make Lowell's the best in the country."

Mrs. Rogers announced she would offer a cash prize of $500 annually and a silver cup for a 50-mile race of cabin planes. The course will be such that the planes will be within sight of the Lowell Airport at all times.

Four small planes landed at the airport today in connection with the luncheon, all from Boston. Two army planes piloted by Lieut. Crawford Hollidge and Capt. Bartlett Beamas, had as passengers Lieut. E. T. Dungan and Lieut. George Lusk. A navy plane operated by Joseph Lynch carried Daniel Rochford as passenger while Ralph Wickford, piloting a Travelair, carried Charles Snyder.

FORGRAVE MAY BE PUNISHED

A sentiment favoring some form of punishment for William M. Forgrave, Anti-Saloon League superintendent, was crystallizing among members of the Legislature today, following collapse of the charges that a wild party at the State House followed proroguing of the Legislature last year.

The General Court under the State constitution, may "punish by imprisonment every person, not a member, who shall be guilty of disrespect by any disorderly or contemptuous behavior in its presence."

Indications are that an effort to invoke this authority will be made from the floor of the House. If that fails it is believed pressure will be brought to adopt the Logan order calling for a severe rebuke for Forgrave.

In the face of developments Forgrave issued a new statement in which he blamed the newspapers for dedogatory references to members of the Legislature and still maintaining there was "a party." He denied that he was aware that both of the detectives he employed had criminal records but admitted he had since discovered it to be a fact.

GORDON IN BIG BOOTLEG DEAL, HE ADMITS

George W. Gordon, confessed embezzler of $600,000 from the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., testifying today in the trial of his wife, Eva Etta Gordon, and her two sisters, charged with complicity in his larcenies, admitted for the first time he had been involved in a big bootleg deal.

The admission was made when he told of giving his wife $35,000 in two gifts, on their wedding and her birthday anniversaries.

Repeated questioning by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle failed to obtain any details from Gordon other than that he was the middleman, and he did not care to name anyone else.

The witness had previously admitted taking approximately $600,000 from the steamship company, by which he was employed as traveling auditor and station accountant.

At the request of Doyle, he outlined the manner in which he manipulated vouchers in obtaining the money. He said he changed vouchers from "collect" to "prepaid," had them endorsed at the comptroller's office and then collected the money from the cashier.

To Select Reading Successor

Caucuses to discuss candidates to fill the office of attorney-general, vacated by Arthur K. Reading, will be held by the Republicans and Democrats of the House next week. The Republicans have yet to set the date, but the Democrats have decided to hold theirs on Tuesday at 1 p. m.

State House "Rum Gossipers" Hit by Senate Chaplain

What is regarded as a rebuke to the makers of unfounded charges on rum conditions at the State House was made today by Chaplain Charles H. Moss in his prayer at the opening of the Senate session. He said:

"In times when the public mind is inflamed with many matters, when persons' reputations are at stake, we pray that those of us who are charged with responsibility shall be wise and careful in what we say and what we do, that we shall not bring reproach upon the good name of the Commonwealth or those responsible for its affairs, nor upon wise, high-minded and honorable citizens.

"And this caution we should apply to ourselves as well as to others in all conduct of affairs."

CYCLE RIDER IN FATAL CRASH DID NOT FLEE

Cyrus Jacobs of Hartford st., Roxbury, driver of the motorcycle which figured in the Stoughton crash in which Miss Helen Bunn was killed, did not flee the scene of the accident but reported to the police after treating his own injuries, it developed today. In an earlier edition of the Boston Evening American it was stated that police were searching for the motorcycle driver whose identity was unknown.

MEDFORD BOYS WAIT FOR NEWS OF HOP
These Medford high school boys spend much time on the doorsteps of Amelia Earhart's home in that city awaiting news of the Friendship's transatlantic flight.

DOCTOR AVERS MRS. KNAPP IS 'TAKING RAP'

"I would rather go to jail as a felon than be called a squealer by my friends."

From her sick bed in her home in Hillside st., Bedford, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, convicted of misappropriation of census funds while Secretary of State of New York, sent out this message today.

It was delivered to a Boston Evening American representative by Dr. Theodore Ely, her physician, who declared Mrs. Knapp had "taken the rap" for others and was suffering the consequences of her loyalty to party.

Dr. Ely said the former New York secretary of state is suffering from a complete nervous breakdown with other complications due to her age, and is in a very serious condition.

Alone, with the exception of a nurse, in the home which she leased in January of 1927, Mrs. Knapp is battling against illness, with the prospect of an operation when her condition warrants it, according to the doctor.

WOULD RATHER DIE.

In order that she may have absolute quiet, rest and seclusion, her mother and sister, Mrs. Palmer, have gone to Mrs. Palmer's camp in New Hampshire. Another sister, Mrs. Mary L. Bodkin, lives across the street at 8 Hillside st.

"Mrs. Knapp is in very bad shape," said Dr. Ely, who did not mince words in expressing his opinion of the treatment which he charged she had received from the New York state authorities.

"Two weeks after her first trial she was placed on trial again," said the physician, who went to Albany to testify as to the physical condition of the first woman executive of New York.

"Her entire nervous system has been shattered and I greatly fear that her mind will give way under the strain. She told me today she would rather die than live.

"I replied that she had never been a quitter, and that she should not quit now and leave the politicians responsible for her condition victorious. It was then she gave me the message that she would rather go to jail as a felon than be called a squealer by her friends.

VICTIM OF LOYALTY

"Mrs. Knapp is the victim of a frameup. She took the rap for others. She knows far more than she told.

"Instead of throwing her cards on the table at the trial, she shut up like a clam and is now suffering the consequences of her downright loyalty to her party.

"I have ordered absolute rest and quiet for her, and to facilitate it her mother and Mrs. Palmer have gone to New Hampshire. In about a month if Mrs. Knapp's condition warrants it she will enter a sanitarium in Bethel, Me., where some operative work will be done."

CHINESE EXECUTE GIRLS AND BOYS, COMMUNISTS

Canton, China, June 8 (AP)—Fourteen girls and three schoolboys, arrested in Communist raids, were executed today. They died bravely, firmly announcing their belief that the future success of Communism would be aided by their martyrdom.

Near Swatow, 400 students and teachers were arrested at a Communist meeting. The police heard of the gathering from a panic-stricken student informer who was said to have drawn a lot to kill his parents and instead ran to police headquarters.

100 KIWANIANS OFF ON TRIP TO ROCKIES

About 100 members of the New England Kiwanis Clubs leave Boston this afternoon over the Boston & Albany railroad, for a trip through the Canadian Rockies to Seattle and return. The party will reach Seattle on June 15, leaving on their return trip June 21, and arriving in Boston July 5.

FULLER PLANS 'L' MESSAGE

Governor Fuller will send a special message on the Boston Elevated situation to the Legislature, probably on Tuesday, he announced today following a three-hour conference with Lieut.-Gov. Allen and Joseph Wiggin, the Governor's personal counsel.

Although it is known the Governor favors public control, he gave no hint of the purport of his message. He has been studying the situation for several days.

The Elevated issue has been paramount in the Legislature this session and the Governor's message is taken to mean, as he himself previously warned, that there will be no prorogation of the General Court until the question is settled.

U. S.-AUSTRALIAN FLIERS SPEEDING TO GOAL

SOUTHERN CROSS IS DUE IN BRISBANE LATE TODAY

miles of the dangerous cruise was accomplished in two hops terminating here.

Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, commander of the expedition, was at the controls when the huge monoplane boomed down the white stretch of Naselai Beach and soared gracefully out to sea. In the cabin with him were C. T. P. Ulm, Australian co-pilot; James Warner, radio operator, and Harry Lyon, navigator, the latter two Americans.

The plane circled Suva as a gesture of farewell, then headed straight for the southwest. In three minutes it was lost to view. Practically every white person on the islands, together with thousands of dusky natives, were on hand to wave "bon voyage."

Almost immediately Radioman Warner unwound the craft's antennae and began tapping the key which will keep the world informed of the latest episode in the greatest air adventure yet attempted.

His first message was from Ulm, the co-pilot, addressed to the San Francisco Examiner, as intercepted here, it read:

"Southern Cross left 2:52 p. m., Suva time. All O. K."

It was signed "Ulm."

After they had been out four hours, during which time Warner had sent several jocular messages, Co-Pilot Ulm sent this one, addressed to "QST":

"Smithy just remarked 'It's rough here.' It is really remarkable how one's air mind expands. A few years ago a 1700-mile flight over water was enormous. Now it is the shortest of our three hops. Please thank all who sent cables of congratulations to us at Honolulu and Suva. Impossible to reply individually. Cheerio."

If the fliers are able to maintain their 90 miles per hour average established over the first 5,550 miles, they should negotiate the present hop in 20 hours, arriving at Brisbane shortly before noon, Suvan time. This would be about 8 o'clock tonight (Friday) Boston daylight saving time.

At Brisbane, the two Americans are scheduled to leave the expedition and the Australians will proceed alone over the intervening course of 500 miles to Sydney. The Americans had been engaged to fly only as far as Suva, but upon reaching there Commander Kingsford-Smith was so impressed with their services that he invited them to "honor the expedition" as far as Brisbane.

During the two hours of the night when heavy rains fell in the path of the speeding monoplane, when ominous clouds obstructed vision and when the outlook was blackest, the crew of the sturdy plane repeated the radio message, "All's well," to an anxious world.

Fearing to arouse apprehension in the minds of those who watched their progress, they allowed no inkling of their ordeal to escape through their wireless, conveying only words of cheer, when their hopes were at the lowest level in the midst of a grim battle against the sea storm.

The only intimation caught by radio listeners of their struggle against the elements came at 6:14 p. m., Suva time, some three and a half hours after the plane had taken off from Naselai Beach.

"Possibility of fairly dirty weather tonight, hence self will relieve Smithy at controls now so that he may be rested for night flying," said a message, signed by Capt. Ulm, co-pilot.

It was not until almost three hours had elapsed and darkness had enveloped the plane that the daring fliers saw fit to report their struggle against rain and clouds.

REVIVED BY WHISKEY.

"We did not want to worry anyone while we were in it," said a message, picked up at 9 p. m., "but now that we are out of it, we will tell you that for the last two hours we have been battling worst weather of whole flight.

"At 7500 feet to 6000 feet altitude exceptionally heavy rains and bumps, giving us several drops of over 400 feet at a time and generally a series of mean tricks by the elements on this one last stage.

"Smithy and I are not through, but as soon as moon comes up and blind flying ends for the night, we will eat and have a shot of our emergency ration of whiskey. I'm too cold to write more. We have no gloves."

The message was signed by Ulm and concluded with the heartening words:

"Cheerio. All well. We are okay."

Apparently the menace of the tropical rains had not yet disappeared when this message was transmitted, but the crew of the Southern Cross had conquered the worst phase of the rainstorm and was anticipating the appearance of a moon to pierce the darkness of the clouds.

INTO SECOND STORM.

Fears, however, were again stirred more than an hour later, when a message was intercepted which had been transmitted to the plane from a station in Sydney, Australia, and contained a forecast of weather along the path still stretching ahead of the Southern Cross.

The message, addressed to KHAB, call letters of the plane, and timed at 10:15 (Greenwich meridian time) said:

"Must expect one or two repetitions of storm experienced at 7 p. m. (Sydney time). Sharp squalls to the southwest and rain during next couple hours before wind settles down to steady southeast."

The steady stream of messages, which had been pouring out of the plane since its takeoff, became slightly weaker and less frequent at about this hour of the night. Earlier in the afternoon, when the plane had been some four hours in the air, it reported that a radio generator had given out.

Trouble in transmitting had evidently increased aboard the craft, stations here reporting that it was necessary on several occasions to ask the Southern Cross to repeat several words in order to decipher its message.

At 10:15 p. m., a Sydney station message seemed difficult. To which the plane replied that signals from Sydney were also picked up with difficulty.

"Will see you later; want to save batteries," concluded the message to Sydney from the plane, indicating that the crew were taking no chances with their transmitting apparatus in order to insure themselves that it would not fail in case of emergency.

"Certain of Success" Fliers Radio Brisbane

London, June 8 (INS)—"We are certain of success; it will not be long now," was the optimistic radiogram tapped out from the transpacific monoplane Southern Cross as it beat its way southward through the clouds today from Naselai Beach, Fiji Islands, to Brisbane, Australia, said a Central News dispatch from Sydney.

Ever since the plane hopped off at 2:52 p. m. (9:52 p. m. Thursday, New York eastern standard time), Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions kept in wireless touch with the Sydney wireless station. Messages were sent out at regular intervals while the plane sped southward at the average speed of 78 knots an hour.

At 4 p. m. (Sydney time), the Southern Cross reported slight compass trouble. A little later the wireless operator, James Warner, said that clouds were piling up in an ominous way and that the fliers faced the prospect of a stormy night. At that time the machine was traveling at an altitude of about 3000 feet.

MRS. COLLINS' FORTUNE WILLED TO CHARITIES

Numerous charitable bequests were contained in the will of Mrs. Fannie J. Collins, widow of the founder of Collins & Fairbanks Co., which was filed in Suffolk Probate Court today.

The Floating Hospital receives $5000, the Y. M. C. A. $3000 and $1000 addition for use in its Dorchester district, supplementing a bequest of her husband.

The principals of $50,000 trust funds are to be distributed to several charitable institutions upon death of the beneficiaries. "For faithful service," Warren Cobb receives $5000. The residue of the estate goes to her son, Fred B. Collins of Wayland.

STAR WRITERS AT KANSAS CITY FOR AMERICAN

Ruth Hanna McCormick, daughter of the late Mark Hanna and widow of Senator Medill McCormick, who recently won the Republican nomination for Congresswoman-at-large from Illinois, has oined the staff of writers covering the Republican National Convention for the Hearst newspapers.

Mrs. McCormick, who has inherited a great deal of her famous father's political sagacity, will furnish articles strikingly illustrative of woman's new place in American politics, the first to appear Sunday morning.

Associated with Mrs. McCormick in furnishing the readers of the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers with clear-cut, entertaining word pictures of the activities at the convention, will be a large staff of experts.

There will be Elias A. McQuaid of the Boston Evening American staff, veteran newspaperman, writer of the famous Minute Man editorials, and one of the best political writers in the East.

John T. Lambert, special writer for Universal Service, whose articles from Washington have been a feature for several years, represented the American at the State House when Calvin Coolidge was Governor of Massachusetts. He is thoroughly familiar with national politics, and has attended many conventions.

James T. Williams, Jr., editor Universal Serevice, with headquarters at Washington, is a former editor of the Boston Transcript; former editor of the Boston Evening American and for many years a correspondent at the capital.

With them will be a corps of International News Service stars, every one a picked man, headed by Barry Faris, general news manager.

These include George R. Holmes, manager of the Washington bureau; William K. Hutchinson, head of the Capitol staff at Washington; Kenneth Clark, assistant chief of the Washnigton bureau; William S. Neal, head of the I. N. S. staff at the House of Representatives; George E. Durno, White House correspondent; Lawrence Sullivan of the Washington staff; Roland Krebs, noted magazine writer; Raymond I. Borst, manager of the Albany bureau, and numerous other staff correspondents anad special writers.

Drive for Tilson for Second Place Is Launched

Kansas City, June 8 (AP)—The need of a running mate for presidential nominees was brought out here today in maneuvers preliminary to the Republican national convention formal opening of a headquarters for Representative John O. Tilson of Connecticut. Tilson, Republican floor leader in the House, is the first vice-presidential candidate to be presented by an office staff. John Jay Hopkins of New York is in charge.

Women in Battle to Modify Volstead Act

Washington, June 8 (AP)—While a number of women's organizations are planning drives for the incorporation of prohibition enforcement planks in the Kansas City and Houston conventions' platforms, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment announced today the formation of "a women's national volunteer committee," which includes the names of two senators' wives and two of the four women members of Congress.

Before the resolutions committees of both the Republican and Democratic parties the association plans to present pleas for planks urging modification of the Volstead act. The organization's representatives appearing before the committees probably will include women members, under plans of the association's officials.

The membership of the committee includes prominent women from nearly every section of the country.

DEATH CAR DRIVER HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Charged with manslaughter in the death of Daniel Crowley, 55, of Roxbury, at A and Melcher sts., South Boston, Frank Connelissen 21, of H st., South Boston, today waived examination in South Boston court and was held in $2000 for the grand jury. Connelissen is chauffeur for a South Boston doctor and it is charged his car struck Crowley, a pedestrian, then crashed into a truck.

UNITARIAN EXECUTIVES IN SESSION TOMORROW

Unitarian executives and heads of departments, representing the American Unitarian Association, the Laymen's League, the Women's Alliance and the Young People's Religious Union, will hold a series of conferences at the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead, tomorrow and Sunday, for the purpose of shaping the church policies for the coming year.

GOVERNMENT PLANS LIGHTER SEAPLANES

Langley Field, Va., June 8—Seaplanes of the future need not be so cumbersome as those of the past.

This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

BATTLE LINES TIGHTEN AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, June 8 (AP)—The line of battle for the Republican presidential nomination stood clearly defined today between Herbert Hoover and a determined group organized and pledged to defeat him.

The combined strength of Lowden, Curtis, Watson, Goff and the remnants of the Willis organization has fixed one immediate objective—the blocking of Hoover's selection on an early ballot. These strategists aim to hold intact the votes of their own candidates while endeavoring to wean from the Hoover and doubtful delegations enough strength to keep the issues in doubt.

FIND WEAK SPOT.

Analyzing Hoover's second-choice support as his weakest point, the opposition councillors are searching for a rallying standard and some of them have injected and have suggested switching some of their own votes to Coolidge on the opening ballot to prevent a stampede to the Hoover band wagon. Some of them recognized that a movement to Coolidge might not only defeat Hoover, but also the coalition candidates, but they feel that Coolidge would be better than Hoover.

HOOVER FORCES CONFIDENT.

All these activities in the enemy camp, which is under the command of Louis L. Emmerson, Republican gubernatorial nominee of Illinois, found the Hoover forces still confident. James W. Good, the Hoover manager, issued an appeal for party harmony.

Both the Hoover and allied groups are banking heavily on the still doubtful and powerful delegation that Secretary Mellon is bringing from Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania strength of 79 votes is looked upon by Hoover men as sufficient to put their chief over, and the opposition likewise regard it as big enough to swing the pendulum the other way.

SIX MUST GIVE LIVES FOR SLAYING PRISON TRUSTY

Sacramento, Calif., June 8 (A.P.)—The six leaders of the riot at Folsom Prison last Thanksgiving Day, recently convicted of first degree murder, were sentenced to death in Superior court. Motion for new trial was denied.

The death penalty was meted out for the killing of George Baker, a convict trusty, slain during the riot. Judge Malcolm C. Glenn in passing sentence decided that the men be hanged in the prison where the killing occurred.

HUB WOMAN DRAWS SMITH'S HOROSCOPE

This is the horoscope of Alfred E. Smith. By it, Catharine Victoria Thompson, astrologer, says he will be President—some day, if he lives long enough.

SMITH TO WIN! —IF HE LIVES LONG ENOUGH

"Al" Smith of New York will be President of the United States some day, but he probably will not be successful this year in the presidential fight.

This is according to his horoscope worked out by Catharine Victoria Thompson of 199 Audubon rd., Boston astrologer, in which she says Smith, within a few months, "should gain by the news of the death of a very dignified and thoughtful and a very important personage."

In 1920, Catharine Victoria Thompson predicted the election of Warren G. Harding as president, and when that came, forecast that something would happen to Harding that would put Coolidge in the President's chair.

She says, in her Smith horoscope: Governor Smith was born on Tuesday, December 30, 1873, at 5 p. m., in New York city.

"The Governor was born under Cancer, a water sign that rules New York city, and so his fortunes are centered in New York.

"The moon is his ruling planet and she is placed in Gemini, a restless, talkative, nervous sign, in his twelfth house, which has to do with limitations, confinement to a sick room, jealousy and craft, and as she is in splendid aspect to the sun that lights up this earth, he meets with success, rapid promotion, prosperity and help from powerful persons, honor and esteem.

"It is the best aspect with which a man can be born—to have the sun and moon friendly to each other. He was really born with a silver spoon in his mouth. Venus is also sending him many friendly rays and so are Mercury and the aged Saturn, so that he should be popular with men and women in all calsses of society.

"If he lives to a great age, and long enough for the secret and subtle Neptune placed in his House of Friends, hopes and wishes to be realized, he can then carry his church to a great and sweeping success, almost like a tidal wave at the full moon.

GIRL TOO WISE FOR FLIM-FLAM A LA CHICAGO

A "found" pocketbook, a suspicious woman and a short chase, brought James Reese, alias Garner, of Chicago, in police toils today, together with a woman companion.

Reese, according to the police, picked up a pocketbook on Boston Common yesterday in the sight of Margaret Smith of Framingham.

Imagine his surprise when he found several $10 bills. Margaret looked honest, he told her, and he would divide—if, and but—only on the condition that she draw $500 from her bank and put it in the pocketbook.

Inspectors Burke, Mulrey, Concannon, Lyons and Taylor thought they might enrich themselves by a visit to the Common.

MAVIS

TRADE MARK REG.

CHOCOLATE DRINK

To the Dealer—Again!

Mavis is a tremendous success—not merely another 5c bottled drink. Mavis has a background unparalleled in the bottled beverage world. Mavis represents a lifetime of thought, energy and experience in chocolate making. The first bottle of Mavis cost nearly a million dollars to produce, which is responsible for the slogan—

"A Million Dollar Drink That Sells for a Nickel'

Mavis is the first pure chocolate drink ever bottled and is equal to a chocolate milk drink sold at from 10c to 20c at soda fountains. Mavis is sold in bottles only.

Mavis is the one 5c bottled drink that has big food value. Mavis is made from pure chocolate—honey—sugar and other wholesome ingredients, sterilized and pasteurized in the bottle. Mavis contains NO acid—NO coloring matter—NO drugs—NO preservatives.

A 5c bottle of Mavis is equal in food value to six ounces of whole wheat bread—or two fresh eggs—or a glass of grade A milk. Mavis is both a sensible thirst quencher and a food, so desirable in this modern day when one eats and runs.

Of course you know that Mavis is always at its best—Ice Cold—and dealers are requested to kindly serve their customers with Mavis at its best.

Another Word to the Public!

Day after day—men, women and children are breaking away from the "acquired taste" drinks and are joining the Mavis ranks.

You don'thave to become educated to the taste of Mavis. Mavis is Real chocolate and chocolate is the oldest and most popular flavor in the world. More chocolate drinks are consumed daily than all other drinks combined and chocolate is one of the most healthful foods known to man. That's Mavis—Ask for it by name and avoid substitutes.

P. S. In less than five years, Mavis is destined to become the largest selling 5c bottled drink in the world with the outlook for sales of over twenty million bottles per day.

Positions open for experienced salesmen who know the local trade and can sell Mavis from trucks.

Apply by letter only with full particulars (confidential) to the sales department of MAVIS BOTTLING CO. of New England, 31 Main Street, Cambridge, Mass.

MESSAGES TO NOBILE BRING NO RESPONSE

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 8 (AP)—Increasingly doubtful that direct radio signals have been heard from the missing dirigible Italia, the base ship Citta Di Milano today kept sending out messages of confidence and cheer in the vague hope that the Italia might hear them.

While the radio operator of the Citta Di Milano had picked up faint messages yesterday which he thought sure were from the Italia, he was unable to get any answer today in response to incessant calls.

Every hour he signalled for the Italia, sending messages telling her that wherever she might be, in Franz Josef Land or elsewhere, rescue expeditions were under way.

Weather conditions were again unfavorable today and Capt. Riiser-Larsen, Norwegian navigator, was unable to make the flight to northern Spitzbergen that he had been planning to help Lieut. Luetzow Holm, a brother officer, on the air reconnaissance now in progress off northern Spitzbergen.

Five Soviet Fliers Off to Hunt Nobile

Leningrad, Soviet Russia, June 8 (INS)—Three seaplanes, carrying five fliers, hopped off today for Archangel on the first leg of four separate flights to Franz Josef Land in search of the missing polar expedition headed by Gen. Umberto Nobile.

The flights to Franz Josef Land will be commenced when the ice breaker Maligin has established a Nobile base off Nova Zembla Land.

PACIFIC FLIERS OVERWHELMED BY WELCOME

others coming over by launch.

We were greeted at Naselai by quaint, cheerful Fijian natives and British Capt. Samuel Ellis and Maj. Cleve Joske. Throughout, these two have rendered us invaluable organizing assistance.

The governor loaned us H. M. S. Pioneer, which carried fuel and oil from Suva. This was brought ashore in surf boats, through heavy surf, by the laughing, happy natives.

HAUL UP PLANE

We found it impossible to finish refuelling the plane in time for a takeoff before the tide rose. Therefore we were compelled, reluctantly, to wait.

Until today, we and our helpers have been aboard the Pioneer, where we spent the night and obtained much needed sleep after a heavy day's work on the beach.

There were many amusing incidents while the natives went ashore and came back to the Pioneer in surf boats. All were well soaked. When the tide rose, hundreds of natives, under direction of our friends, hauled the plane above high water mark, after first cutting down much tropical undergrowth, to get off the beach.

As they worked, the natives shouted these words: "WAQA-VUKA," meaning "the bird boat."

PURSE OF GOLD

On the previous night, the mayor of Suva, in behalf of its citizens, had presented us with a purse of 200 sovereigns. The school children gave us floral tributes, in the form of the constellation Southern Cross. The floral offerings to our American comrades took the form of the American flag.

Smith was given, by a native chieftain, the Tambua, which is the sacred whale's tooth—considered a very high native honor. This ceremony was performed in full native ceremonial dress, in the governor's presence.

We are overwhelmed with the kindness shown us here and cannot adequately express our feelings.

Please, tell the world through your columns, how wonderful the Fijians and residents have been.

We'll see you all, soon. Cheerio

'MAWRUS' HAS LOST 3D WIFE

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—The third wife of Alexander Carr, who was "Mawruss" in "Potash and Perlmutter" stage success, has sued for divorce here.

Mrs. Carr, who was Helen Cressman, a bathing beauty of the films, charges in her suit that her husband fled from New York to avoid paying her $100 a week alimony for herself and 18-months-old child. While he "languished in luxury" and indulged in "drunken brawls," she charges, she was obliged to borrow railroad fare to follow him here.

The actor's two former wives were Mary Carr and Helen Cunningham Carr, both actresses.

GUILTY OF DISTILLING WITHOUT GIVING BONDS

Springfield, June 8 (AP)—Anton Kemp of West Springfield was found guilty in Federal Court here today of engaging in the distilling business without giving bonds, the conviction being, it is said, the first in this district on that charge.

He was indicted on four similar counts and found guilty on three. On one count he was fined $1000 and sentenced to serve two years in Atlanta penitentiary, on another he was fined $500 with two years imprisonment and on a third he was fined $1000.

The prison terms run concurrently. He appealed to the circuit court and was ordered to furnish $5000 bonds.

FIVE WOMEN ON HUNGER STRIKE IN DUBLIN JAIL

Belfast, Northern Ireland, June 8 (AP)—The agent of the Irish Republic party said today that five women prisoners at Montjoy jail, Dublin, had been on a hunger strike since Tuesday.

They claimed they were political prisoners and demanded political treatment. He said the women were Mrs. McDermott and Misses Eva Jackson, Florence McCarthy, S. McInery and S. Humphreys.

WORCESTER PLANT TO GO TO RHODE ISLAND

Cumberland, R. I., June 8 (AP)—Announcement was made today that the Worcester Textile Company would move from Worcester, Mass., to this town. The company recently purchased at auction the mills of the Hansahoe Company and has been granted exemption of taxes on the property for 10 years by the town council. The company will manufacture mohair and camel hair fabric, employing 150 operatives.

It also was announced the Guayan Mills, Inc., of Central Falls had acquired the plant formerly operated by the Frank Wood Manufacturing Company here and would operate it for the manufacture of rayon products.

MISS DEL RIO WINS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, June 8 (AP)—A dispatch to the Times from Nogales, Sonora, says a full decree of divorce was granted to Dolores Del Rio, film star, by a court in the Mexican city.

The suit, filed in Nogales April 21, charged incompatibility and followed a trial separation of four months, when Jaime Martinez Del Rio, left Hollywood for New York to pursue his career as a writer. At that time he said he could not continue to live in the film colony where he was becoming known only as "Dolores Del Rio's husband."

Informed at her home here that the divorce had been granted, Miss Del Rio said she believed her former husband was en route to Europe as he expected to sail yesterday from New York.

Miss Del Rio denied she would wed her direcor, Edwin Carewe, who recently filed suit for a Mexican divorce from Mary Akin. Miss Del Rio was a member of the party which accompanied Carewe on a yachting trip to Mazatlan, Sialoa, Mexico, where Carewe's suit for divorce was filed.

The Del Rios were married in 1921 after a courtship which began at a Mexico City charity bazaar.

It was at another Mexico City social function two years ago that Carewe met Miss Del Rio. He induced her to come to Hollywood to try her fortune in motion pictures.

"I am very happy that it is over with," she said. "I am interested only in my work and do not at this time contemplate any other matrimonial ventures."

POKER GAME COSTS PATROLMAN HIS JOB

A seven-handed poker game cost Patrolman Herman Winchester his job today. Raiding a house in Geneva ave., Dorchester, where they had been told a game was in progress, Sergt. Benjamin Wall and Patrolmen John Kelley and Joseph Davison found their brother-officer present, they testified in Dorchester court today. The seven arrested, including Winchester, pleaded guilty to being present where gambling implements were seized, and each paid a fine of $10. Capt. Matthew J. Dalby gave Winchester the choice of resigning or going before a trial board, and he resigned, it was announced. The other six arrested gave their names as Percy Ledwell, Charles Hamomnd, John O'Neil, John Jacobs, James Murphy and John Smith.

THREE HELD IN RUM 'RAP' CASE

A "take-the-rap" case that didn't "take" was revealed in municipal court today in the arraignment of three men of Castle st., South End, on liquor charges.

Joseph Wilson, who was to face the court for a liquor "firm" that was to manufacture liquor in a Middlesex st. house, according to his admissions today, told the story to the court.

Wilson was to hire a room for William E. Newton, he said, but before business started, Sergt. Crimmins and a squad of police from East Dedham st. station raided their Castle st. address. Alipio Leo fell into the toils. Wilson and Newton pleaded guilty and asked to go on their own recognizance. Leo pleaded not guilty.

HIT AND RUN CAR GETS TWO HITS

Two persons were injured and an auto and wagon damaged today in Broadway, Revere, when a hit-and-run truck driver made two hits and got away.

In the first crash, directly in front of City Hall, the auto of Mrs. Marion Becker of Library st., Chelsea, lost two mudguards and Mrs. Becker received slight injuries.

In the chase by civilians that followed, the truck crashed into a fruit wagon driven by Samuel Neapolitan of Fenwood ave., Revere. Neapolitan was thrown to the street as the horse bolted. The animal was halted by Patrolman Robert Barry, near Revere Beach parkway but the truck driver sped into Chelsea. Neapolitan was treated for injuries.

Police got the registration number of the truck.

SIX GYPSIES ARE HELD IN METHUEN SHOOTING

Methuen, June 8—Six of the 29 gypsies arrested following the shooting affray on Dooley farm two weeks ago were held in a total of $7000 bail when arraigned in court today. Teni Bimbo, tribe leader, who is alleged to have shot Joe Mitchell, leader of another tribe, was held in $2000 until July 13 pending the condition of the latter. The remaining 23 were released upon payment of costs after having pleaded nolo to disturbance charges.

HUB WINS POINT ON WATER BILL

A new draft of a bill providing that the term of the bonds for the $65,000,000 additional water supply development for metropolitan Boston shall not exceed 30 years with deferred payments, a partial victory for Mayor Nichols was today reported in the Senate by the Ways and Means Committee.

All bonds issued after the effective date of the bill to Dec. 31, 1935, would be paid in 20 annual payments beginning with 1936.

Those issued between Jan. 1, 1936, and Dec. 31, 1941, would be paid in 20 annual payments beginning with 1942.

Those issued between Jan. 1, 1942, and Dec. 31, 1947, would be paid in 20 annual payments beginning 1948 and the remaining bonds issued after that date would be paid from the date of issue.

TOLD OF WIFE'S DEATH AS HE GOES TO JAIL

Jailed today because he was unable to pay a fine of $120 imposed in East Boston court for auto law violations, Ancile E. Homan, 27, was told of the sudden death of his wife in Massachusetts General Hospital. Homan pieced together a vehicle of sorts out of a Bedford auto junk heap and was driving it through East Boston when arrested. He had no license, wrong number plates, and the car was neither insured nor registered, police charged.

ANNOUNCE PLANS FOR FLIGHT, U. S. TO JAPAN

Chicago, June 8 (AP)—Eugene McDonald, Arctic explorer and president of the Zenith Radio Corporation, and L. J. Herrmann, sportsman and theater owner, both of Chicago, today revealed plans for a transpacific flight to Japan this summer in the Zenith Albatross, described as the largest parasol type monoplane ever constructed. Charles F. Rocheville and Albin K. Peterson, designers, would be the pilots, and it was said both McDonald and Herrmann might accompany them as passengers.

HOLLYWOOD CAFE BLAST LEADS TO ONE ARREST

Hollywood, Cal., June 8 (AP)—An explosion which wrecked the Russian Eagle Cafe, a picturesque part of the night life of the film colony, injured eight persons and caused a property loss of $75,000 was charged by the authorities today to an attempt to collect on a week old insurance policy. That theory of the fire and explosion has resulted in the arrest in San Francisco of Michael J. Tocaze, owner of a small gift shop in the building, on charges of having set a dozen or more small fires on the roof. He recently took out a $90,000 fire insurance policy on his stock.

NEW ENGLAND IS IDEAL FIELD FOR PLANE BUILDING

Woodstock, Vt., June 8—In the manufacture and development of aircraft, New England possesses a golden opportunity the New England Council, in quarterly session here, was told today by a committee of 14 research consultants headed by Dr. S. W. Stratton, president of Technology.

The committee made two recommendations:

1—Formation of a New England aircraft development committee to furnish information and advice to manufacturers and municipalities in connection with air progress.

2—Establishment of landing field committees in every city and town of New England to take definite steps for either an airport or an emergency field.

New England is peculiarly adapted to aircraft manufacture, the council learned from the committee.

"New England is particularly well situated in covering the advantages from a manufacturing standpoint, of ample potential supply of capital, suitable buildings and locations, engineering ability, highly skilled craftsmen and available materials," said the report.

"Crystalizing these advantages into action is the immediate problem."

Instead of an exodus of New England industries to other parts of the United States, "more industries are being attracted to New England than are being attracted from New England," Charles W. Tobey, chairman of the committee on community development, reported to the council.

In a review of the council's activities, President John S. Lawrence said: "There has been an awakening in New England, but it is more noticed by our visitors and those doing business with us from other parts of the country than it is by ourselves, who are so close to this development from day to day that we scarcely perceive the changes of the past two years."

'ONE MAN HELD ALLIES BACK'

New York, June 8—Why did the Allies, who outnumbered the Central Powers from 3 to 1 to 5 to 1 at all stages of the war, not turn back the German-Austrian forces in half the time and at half the cost actually required?

Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord, first chief of staff of the A. E. F., now president of the Radio Corporation of America, offers an interesting and concise answer in an article written by Brig.-Gen. Henry J. Reilly in July Cosmopolitan.

"It was because the Germans had one man, Hindenburg, in command," Gen. Harbord says. "It was because that one man gathered together on one 'striking mass' all the troops which could be spared from all fronts, and used it to hit the Allies violent blows in their weakest spots.

"It was because the allies had no such one man. The army of each of the countries was independent of the others. It was because instead of a 'striking mass' made up of reserves from each army, each army hung on to its own reserves, even though not engaged in a decisive battle."

Gen. Harbord also includes an answer to that recurrent question, who won the war? He credits the final allied victory to three factors, Marshal Foch, the timely arrival of American troops and Pershing's insistence that his men be trained for open warfare instead of the defensive siege tactics theretofore employed chiefly by the allies.

GRAND JURY TO HEAR WINTHROP RUM CASE

Winthrop rum troubles are expected to be aired before the federal grand jury when it meets next Tuesday, it was learned today with the service of a subpoena on Frank E. Whitman, chairman of the Winthrop board of selectmen.

Whitman stirred the town several months ago with charges that boys and girls of high school age easily procured liquor.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson admitted today that Whitman and others from Winthrop would be heard, but refused to discuss the nature of the evidence they will be asked to give.

NON-STOP FLIGHT ACROSS U. S. ENDS AT COLUMBUS

Columbus, O., June 8 (INS)—The attempted non-stop record flight of Lee Schoenhair and Harry Tucker from San Diego, Cal., to New York City, ended here today when the fliers were forced to bring their plane down when they were turned back by fog near Harrisburg, Pa.

COMMUTERS DELAYED BY ELEVATED TIEUP

Hundreds of commuters were delayed today by a tieup on the Elevated system between Sullivan square and the Everett Terminal. The cause was said to be signal trouble, and according to L officials, the delay was 10 minutes.

YOU often hear it said of her, "she looks well dressed in anything." If you're observant you have also discovered that her device is always to keep her feet irreproachably shod. She's a regular customer of Thayer McNeil's, and very, very style-wise.

Crowley Urges All to Buy $1 Insurance

Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley of Boston wants a Boston Evening American $10,000 accident insurance policy for $1 a year. Although a man of finest physical type, amply able to take care of himself and head of one of the greatest police departments in the country, Supt. Crowley would not be without insurance.

"The peace of mind that the Boston Evening American's $10,000 accident insurance policy brings to any man is worth many times the $1 a year that the policy costs him," said Supt. Crowley. "Every man and woman should have insurance protection," he continued.

"Members of the Boston police department see at first hand the tragedy and suffering caused by the absence of insurance protection.

Supt. M. H. Crowley

[illegible] accident and death have knocked at the [illegible] all efforts of the department to [illegible] in Boston [illegible] grown at an [illegible] rate [illegible]. Most accidents are [illegible] due to [illegible] ones [illegible]. Others are beyond all human prevention and [illegible] to occur. [illegible] there is no better [illegible] and [illegible] than insurance.

"The man or woman who goes without insurance is careless of himself and the welfare of his dependents. With accident insurance within the reach of all there is no excuse of being uninsured.

"In my opinion, the Boston Evening American, in providing this $10,000 accident insurance policy for $1 a year at cost and bearing the additional costs for clerical work and mailing, together with giving up valuable space in its pages, is performing a fine act of public service. I want one of the policies!"

Supt. Crowley is only one of [illegible] Boston Evening American [illegible] policies.

A $10,000 accident insurance policy for $1.00 a year and nothing more to pay. Think of it—protection for yourself and your family. There is no medical examination and no routine to go through. Merely fill out the coupon printed elsewhere in this newspaper. Bring or send it with $1.00, making sure that it will not be lost, to the office of the Boston Evening American at No. 5 Winthrop sq. Then you will receive your $10,000 accident insurance policy.

HUNT NICARAGUAN WHO CAUSED DEATH OF U. S. MAN

Managua, Nicaragua, June 8 (AP)—A man hunt was on today for a political fanatic believed to have been responsible for the killing of an American by derailing the railroad motor car in which he was riding.

The car struck a spike which had been placed on the rail and overturned, [illegible] D. Wedgewood, an auditor employed on the Pacific Railroad of Nicaragua by the J. G. White Engineering Company of New York.

YOUNG AMES ON PLANE FLIGHT TO VIRGINIA

Frederick Lothrop Ames is on another cross-country flight in his Whirlwind Travel Air, with William Eaton Jr. as passenger. This trip is just as far as Virginia and will not take more than four days. Immediately after returning from this flight, Ames will go to Minneapolis for his wife, who is [illegible] there. She scorns all other means of transportation.

A. F. L. HEAD HALTS STRIKE OF PULLMAN CAR PORTERS

FORMER DAUGHTER OF HUB SOON TO BE HERE ON ALL TOO BRIEF VISIT, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Mrs. Arthur Derby of New Orleans Goes Later to Bar Harbor

IN A CERTAIN PARTICULAR THE FASHIONABLES OF BOSTON and the Noblesse of New Orleans have much in common. The feminine contingents thereof find infinite pleasure in buying their headgear from Mrs. Arthur Derby, the whilom Jeanette Barr. Mrs. Derby not many moons ago was a graceful figure in the verymost inner circle of Boston's younger potentates. When butterfly life palled she found hats and their selling a metier for talents and an energy much too lively merely to be expended on the social frivolities of her set. Hats, then it was for her. A shop was opened and flourished. Society flocked to it. Success with a capital "S" arrived almost over night.

THEN MRS. DERBY TOOK HER petite self and her business talents down South, to New Orleans. And there in St. Peter st., the fashionable maid and opulent matron at a chic emporium beneath a sign inscribed "Jane Derby" may procure Parisian chapeaux assimilated to American wear smilingly dispensed by the dynamic Mrs. Derby. Not so very long now, and Mrs. Derby will migrate [illegible] welcome [illegible] warm y enthusiastic sort, delightful and spontaneous.

SHE LINGERS BUT BRIEFLY here, however. What remains of the month of brides and orange blossoms, together with July, will be spent in Bar Harbor, that aristocratic Maine colony that has numbered Derbys among its householders since it commenced to be a fashionable rendezvous. After Bar Harbor, then, the "Jane Derby" plans include a flit over the ocean probably for the expressed purpose of invading Paris and bringing away for future customers the newest hats and fripperies the French fashion stronghold can contrive.

TEA IS A PLEASANT AFTERNOON rite mildly stimulating. Tea, however, taken in the pleasant confines of Mrs. Benamin Franklin Pitman's Tea Garden, June 14, for the Christopher Shop, becomes much more than the five o'clock pastime, since it derives a potency quite exceptional from its surroundings. Mrs. Pitman is just back at her handsome Brookline establishment after one of those world-girdling journeys plutocratic ones undertake so casually nowadays, that luxurious adventuring around the globe the modern delight to indulge in.

HOME WITH MRS. PITMAN came some novelties from Japan bought specially with an eye to Christopher Shop f[illegible] necessities. This collection is put out as the piece de resistance of the June 14th sale. Along with the "Christo Craft" specialties, made by civilians handicapped, they will make a brave showing. Mrs. Pitman's chief philanthropic interest is the Christopher Shop, that flourishing enterprise carried on so expertly by a devoted corps of matrons.

OF COURSE, MRS. HORACE MORISON will be on hand for the sale. Smallest duties for the Christopher Shop find Mrs. Morison enthusiastically alert, as for the big tasks, that absorb day on day of her time and effort; those are cheerfully undertaken and painstakingly served. The Morisons have opened their charming country place in Peterborough, in the delightful colony of people and homes tucked into the southernmost corner of New Hampshire.

I BELIEVE A MORISON DAUGHTER is due for presentation next winter. If the younger daughter about to come out has so brilliant a first winter as the older daughter, Miss Nancy Morison, then will the social world be joyous indeed. A talented girl, Miss Nancy Morison. Debutante parties went on to the less frivolous accompaniment of college studies, and after the first winter had rung down its curtain on buds over to Gotham she hied herself in quest of an honest-to-goodness career in business. Her accomplishment in that line would make a story of itself.

Safety Remedy Lies in Traffic Rules

By Frank A. Goodwin

Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Anna Pollack, 13, a pupil at the Phillips Brooks school in Dorchester, won sixth honors by her essay on safety in the contest conducted by the Boston public schools.

Her paper was excellent. I regret that limited space permits only the following summary.

By ANNA POLLACK

Pupil at Phillips Brooks School

When you are asked to read an article on traffic you probably think "Why should I be bothered? I am not a traffic officer."

Frank A. Goodwin

Perhaps not, but we make an appeal to you in the name of humanity. Look up the [illegible]ing statistics showing the number of accidents by motor vehicles. Each life lost means sorrow somewhere; each temporary injury, physical pain.

Life, happiness and earning power—the assets that an [illegible] most [illegible] are sacrificed daily because of the destructive power of these deadly vehicles.

Why is this true? It is due not only in the growth in the number of automobiles but also to domineering drivers and reckless pedestrians.

There are two sides to the question. The operator of a motor vehicle has many difficulties. A pedestrian has many [illegible] working against his safety too.

Anna Pollack

If you are an operator, see your car inspected frequently. Don't cut in or out of traffic. Enter the line of traffic cautiously. After you make sure that you have sufficient room, signal with your hand to the other drivers and take your place in the line.

You can avoid collisions by keeping at a safe distance from the car ahead. Be very watchful when backing and when approaching intersections. Take all necessary precautions to prevent skidding.

Concentration is an absolute necessity for safe driving.

If you are a pedestrian, do not take unnecessary chances.

Keep your eyes open and your mind clear and alert when crossing a street.

If you follow traffic rules you will be doing your part for this great human cause. Remember that each seemingly small act counts immensely.

Your body is a gift from God. Therefore, it is a sacrilege to abuse it needlessly. Heed warnings, operators and pedestrians, and keep on the safe side

CAROL WON'T DEFEND SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Bucharest, June 8 (INS)—Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, who is now living in Luxembourg with Mme Magda Helene Lupescu, will not defend the divorce action brought against him by his wife Princess Helen, mother of little King Michael of Rumania.

The petition accuses Carol of desertion and of a method of life "unbecoming the dignity of marriage." The petition explained that Carol has been and is now "leading a life in foreign countries which is a disgrace to the institution of marriage."

Colored Lights Are Next Need at Hub Airport

Following the installation of a new flood light at the Boston airport, Lieut. Donald B. Duke, commanding officer, said today that colored lights are now needed.

"The next thing," said Lieut. Duke, "is a series of red lights at the end of each runway, with a green light in the center to point out the direction of the wind. I feel sure this will make the airport much safer to land on at night."

The new flood light, presented by Chandler Hovey, Boston broker, was tested by Lieut. Duke and Lieut. R. F. Cobb, who took planes up and brought them down in the rays of the beacon.

POWER TRUST TRIED TO SWAY STATE BOARDS

Washington, June 8 (INS)—Organized electric power interests have made many attempts to use the influence of state regulating commissions and commissioners for their own ends, and in some instances, according to their written statements, have succeeded, it was disclosed yesterday.

A succession of efforts to enlist the support of the state commissions directly and through the National Association of Railway and Utility Commissioners were shown in newly examined documents in the record of the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the so-called power trust.

The state commissions were created to protect the public from extortionate rates, inadequate service and related practices. They also undertake to insure the utilities a "fair return" for their services.

Regulation by these agencies is ardently championed by the utilities and their national associations, a mass of documentary evidence in the commission's record shows.

Textbooks prepared by the utilities represent the public as "completely protected" by state regulation. They assert that because of this regulation and the new methods it has ushered in "there is no such thing—can be no such thing—as so-called 'watered stock.'"

The Federal Trade Commission in a recent report declared the "impotence of State administrative agencies in the face of the growth of these great combinations (holding companies) is indubitable." Financing accompanying the combining of utility properties bought at excessive prices also leads in some instances to "increased valuations," making possible higher rates, according to the commission.

A utility project to have a "model public utility law" put forward for general adoption by the states under the cloak of the commissioners' prestige as public guardians was recorded in a report from the files of the Rocky Mountain Division, National Electric Light Association.

This report, dealing with committee meetings of the association in Chicago, in March, 1923, said:

"One committee reported, I do not remember which one, that the association has practically completed the drafting of a model public utility law, the American Gas Association and the American Street Railway Association assisting.

"The law had been turned over to the commissioners' association, who had promised to sponsor it so it would appear that the law was the work of the commissioners' association rather than the utilities."

The report bore the name of J. F. Dostal, president of the light association's Rocky Mountain division, and gave a detailed account of the actions of other committees at Chicago.

Herewith is bill presented by Hubert P. Wolfe, professor at University of Colorado, half of whose salary is paid by the Rocky Mountain Public Utility Information Committee whose executive manager, George E. Lewis, is shown at left. According to Lewis' testimony, Wolfe is now collecting facts for the Colorado river fact-finding committee appointed by the University of Colorado to report on Boulder Dam.

Lewis' committee is bitterly opposed to the dam. Wolfe is a member of the fact-finding committee and his chairman is James Grafton Rogers, prominent Denver utility lawyer. Above is the check sent Wolfe to settle his bill.

All these documents are official records in the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the Power Trust.

GLAD CHARLESTOWN SON IS FLYING OCEAN

A Story of Love and the French Revolution

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE life of Cleonie de Montsorbier, a young noblewoman of the French Revolution, is in the hands of Citizen-Deputy Chauviniere. The arrogant deputy, half wolf, half fox, has taken it upon himself to save her from the guillotine, under pretence that she is insane. He visits the madhouse, where he forces the keeper, Dumey, to certify that the girl is dead. Then he offers Cleonie the chance to go in man's attire as his secretary on a tour of provincial inspection. His deferential attitude is disarming, and Cleonie regards him with grave eyes, seeking in his countenance an answer to her unspoken question.

[RAFAEL SABATINI IS author of "Scaramouche," "Captain Blood" and other famous stories. The serial now running here appeared originally under the title "The Nuptials of Corba."]

CHAPTER V.

HE smiled as if he read her thought. "And you have resolved to live," he said. "That is very wise."

"I haven't said so." His penetration alarmed her a little.

"No! But I take so much for granted." He was apologetic. "I assumed it from your calm, from the absence of defiance in your reception of me. It would desolate me to learn that I am mistaken."

"Mone . . . Citizen, if I have misjudged you, I hope that you will have the generosity to forgive me. I . . . hesitate to express myself upon your . . . your concern, your kindness."

"Continue to hesitate. Expressions waste time, and we have none to spare." He threw open the valise. "Here, citoyenne, are the garments in which you will travel." He drew some of them forth. She recoiled, her face on fire.

"These! These! Impossible!"

"Oh, not impossible. Not at all impossible. A little difficult perhaps. But I trust the difficulty will be overcome. If you will study the garments, the mystery of how they should be donned and worn will gradually vanish."

"That! But that is not the difficulty. You misunderstand me purposely."

"In the hope of making you perceive the absurdity of your qualms. My secretary cannot travel in a striped petticoat, and you will find these breeches . . . but there! We have no time to lose. I efface myself that you may make haste. When you are ready, you will find me in the corridor."

A half hour or so later, by when the deputy was in a ferment of impatience, a stripling figure, in round hat, black riding-coat, boots and breeches, emerged from the lady's room. A moment Chauviniere detained her, to scrutinize her with an eye that missed no detail. Thus dressed, she looked shorter by some inches, but her figure was well enough, and the queque of her hair had been cleverly contrived. He approved her in a word and hurried her below. Dumey awaited them, his certificate prepared. That business was soon over and the deputy, Chauviniere, with his secretary closely following, entered the waiting chaise. Dumey closed the door upon them and they were driven away.

No word passed between them till they were approaching the barrier, when Chauviniere handed his companion a bulky portfolio of black leather, partly opening it as he did so. "The passports are there on top. You will present them when they are demanded. It is in your office. No need to speak."

They drew up before the iron gates at the end of the rue d'Enfer.

An officer in a blue coat with red woolen epaulettes (gold having been abandoned as unbecoming an age of equality) pulled open the door and peremptorily challenged the travelers.

"Who goes there?"

It was Chauviniere who from his corner drawled the answer:

"The citizen-deputy Chauviniere, representative en mission. Show him the paper, Antoine, and let us get on."

From under his lashes he watched his companion ready to intervene at the first sign of blundering. But there was no such sign. Unfalteringly she took from the portfolio the papers he had designated and proffered them with a hand that did not even tremble.

The officer, who had put aside a good deal of his peremptoriness upon learning with whom he had to deal, scanned the papers, returned them, saluted stiffly, and carefully reclosed the door. Then his voice rang out in command:

"Pass the citizen-representative Chauviniere."

The iron gates creaked open, the driver cracked his whip, the guard presented arms, and they rolled past the barrier and were out of Paris.

"We've crossed the Rubicon," said Chauviniere in his driest tone, and flung himself back in his corner, his long, lean legs thrust straight before him. Thus reclining, he furtively continued to observe his companion. She was composedly refolding the papers and replacing them in the portfolio. His wonder,

"TOPPING" FRAUDS HIT IN HEALTH DRIVE

Dr. P. H. Mullowney

Director, Hearst Health Laboratory.

The fraud of "topping" is doomed.

The Hearst Health Service intends to smash this illegal practice.

For those who may not recognize the meaning of the term "topping," it is the meanest form of trickery that can be perpetrated on a trusting public.

It is the practice resorted to by dishonest pushcart peddlers, and in many instances by dealers believed to be reliable, of selling a basket of fruit or vegetables of an inferior quality with the upper layer of good and attractive quality.

Those who have been victimized by this form of petty swindling while purchasing fruit or vegetables know very well how aggravating it is.

Naturally, the top layer is all that the customer generally sees, and it is not until arrival at home, probably miles away, that the housekeeper discovers the fraud.

Watch for these unscrupulous "topping" dealers. Report any instance of "topping" to this department and drastic action will be taken against those guilty of this contemptible fraud.

Such tricks are not the property of peddlers solely.

Indeed they claim they are at times compelled to purchase their stocks after viewing unrepresentative samples of what the entire product is supposed to be, in making their own purchases from the wholesale dealers.

The pure food law has no place for deceptions of this kind. It is clearly laid out in our State law that sales of partly decayed foodstuffs may be made only after a full declaration to the intended buyer of the true conditions.

Even when the wholesaler de-

12 CHARGES IN READING ARTICLES

Articles of impeachment against Atty-Gen. Arthur K. Reading were filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives at the State House today by the special investigating committee of the House that conducted a seven weeks' hearing.

Of the 12 articles reported, five concerned Reading's activities with the Decmo Club, Inc., and seven covered the L. A. W. Corporation. The document was signed by Chairman George F. James of Norwood and the remaining eight members of his committee.

"That the said Arthur K. Reading, esquire, was and is guilty of misconduct and maladministration in his office as attorney-general of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," the introductory statement read in part.

The articles were filed after the House adjourned today, thereby postponing action by that body until Tuesday, when the subject of appointment of a board to prosecute the charges will come before the members.

Son Flies Pacific

PROUD OF HIM

Mrs. Liela Lyon, whose son, Harry, an old Charlestown boy, is flying the Pacific in the Southern Cross, today told the Boston Evening American of her pride in him.

LYON'S AGED MOTHER IN HUB ISN'T WORRIED

At the Naval Hospital in Washington an old man in the uniform of a rear admiral sits today, staring from the windows of his room out across the Bolling aviation field and the skies beyond.

In his [illegible] there [illegible] the [illegible] roar of [illegible] airplane motors. But not the motors of those army planes swooping like birds across the field [illegible]. The roar that [illegible] comes to him across 5000 miles of water.

It is the roar of the three motors of the Southern Cross, [illegible] 1000 miles [illegible] of Suva, Fiji Islands, on the last hop of the flight across the Pacific.

In the cabin of the Southern Cross, plotting and checking and [illegible] the course of an uncharted [illegible] with the same skill that carried the plane on its flights from San Francisco to Honolulu and from Honolulu to Suva is Henry Ware Lyon, Jr., an old Charlestown boy, called "Harry Lyon" in the press but Henry to his mother.

And the old rear admiral in the Naval Hospital is Henry Ware Lyon, [illegible] who the span of a lifetime ago was an old Charlestown boy himself.

The story of Harry Lyon and Harry Lyon's father was told to the Boston Evening American today by a gray-haired, smiling woman, wife of one and mother of the other.

In Boston en route to her summer home at Paris, Me., Mrs. Liela Lyon stopped at the Boston Evening American office to learn the latest [illegible] flashed across the world from the tiny spark of a [illegible] in the plane that is carrying her boy to glory.

"Worried? No, I am not worried! I have faith in the plane and faith in [illegible] navigation.

"[illegible] of Henry's plans I had no word. I [illegible] I received a wire [illegible] mother. Hopping off for Australia.'

"He did not want me to worry, and perhaps he did not want me to [illegible]. But I would not have [illegible] time.

"The admiral has been an invalid in the hospital a long time. He is very sick. So I went to him to tell him and [illegible] the papers before [illegible] and picture of Henry. He [illegible] the picture under his [illegible] they take him [illegible] of the flight. He is very proud."

The navigator of the Southern Cross was born in [illegible] at Charlestown, April 22, 1885, while Rear Admiral Lyon was stationed at the Boston Navy Yard. He attended the [illegible] and Prince [illegible] and spent four years at Moravian Military Academy, Nazareth, Pa.

Second B. C.-H. C. Battle at Fenway Tomorrow

BIG CROWD TO WITNESS CONTEST

McNulty and Fone Named as Opposing Hurlers in Second Clash

By JOHN B. GILLOOLY

Boston College and Holy Cross, colorful Jesuit rivals, meet in their second baseball clash of the spring at Fenway Park tomorrow afternoon. Some 25,000 screeching collegians are expected to be at the home of the Red Sox when the umpire sends the teams into action.

Holy Cross won the first game, 6 to 2, at Worcester. Holy Cross by beating both Boston College and Harvard in the same week is conceded the Eastern collegiate title. But they haven't [illegible] the Catholic college title and the Eagles are intent on keeping this honor from the Barry-coached nine.

B. C. BEAT NOTRE DAME

Boston College wound up its hard work in preparation for the game by [illegible] off the highly [illegible] Notre Dame nine. The Eagles didn't look like world beaters in this contest.

Coach Hugh Duffy stated this morning that Hugh McNulty would pitch for Boston College. [illegible] licked Holy Cross three times last spring but was turned back by the Crusaders on Memorial Day.

The Boston College [illegible] hasn't decided yet whether [illegible] McMenimen or [illegible] O'Brien would be behind the bat. [illegible] against Notre Dame, [illegible] one [illegible] O'Brien will do the receiving against the Purple.

Al Fone has again been selected to twirl for the Purple by Coach Jack Barry. Fone gave [illegible] six hits in the previous game and looked very good.

[illegible] Phelan, whose single started McNulty on the [illegible] at Fitton Field, will be behind the bat. Phelan is a poor hitter, but has the power of delivering when things look the gloomiest. He is [illegible] elect of the Holy Cross football team.

With these two batteries selected for the rival clubs there is but little doubt that the gathering of fans at the Fens will get their money's worth.

The finals will be played June 16 and 17.

Hagen Receives Big Welcome

New York, June 8 (AP)—Welcomed by the cheers of a big delegation of golfers and the tunes of a brass band, Walter Hagen returned today on the Majestic as British open champion for the third time.

Accompanying the Haig on his [illegible] trip were two of his professional rivals, Aubrey Boomer and Archie Compston, who beat Hagen by the lopsided margin of 18 and 17 in a 72-hole match held prior to the open tournament.

In contrast with his return a year ago, when he was kept busy explaining and denying reputed references to British golfers abroad as being "too [illegible] dern lazy," Hagen celebrated his return by issuing a statement containing nothing but praise for the British professionals in general.

Tunney Advocates Walking for Exercise

By GENE TUNNEY
Heavyweight Champion of the World

SPECULATOR, N. Y., June 8—Road work is not simply walking, hiking or strolling.

It is a combination of muscular movement, mental absorption and spiritual exhilaration that not only takes off surplus flesh, puts one in a healthful frame of mind and lifts one out of his every-day spirits, but attunes the whole human animal to nature.

One can walk any number of miles a day on city streets and yet derive no benefit. This is true of house-to-house canvassers, delivery boys and mail carriers.

But if walking is made "road work," as it is termed and performed by men in training for sporting contests, then it can be made a most healthful form of exercise.

In order to obtain the greatest health value from road work, it should be done on soft earth paths, or gravel walks. A hard pavement will weaken the arches and soften the soles of the feet.

The head should be held erect, the shoulders thrown back, the arms swinging at the sides and a steady stride maintained. As for breathing, I have found that inhalation and exhalation through the nose is better for developing the wind.

My own road work I prefer to take early in the morning, before breakfast, when the air is cool and fresh and the sun not high. Plodding over wooded trails with the [illegible] on his shoes puts one in a [illegible] frame of mind.

NOW and then a rabbit jumps out [illegible] to stare at you before scurrying off, frogs peer from pools of placid water and there is the welcome sound of dead leaves and crackling branches underfoot.

The pliant footing places a greater strain on the body. The feet alternate [illegible] giving a swaying movement to the body that contributes to back and shoulder muscular development.

Always something happens on each day's hike through the woods that adds a new experience. One day it is a [illegible] caught beneath a fallen tree trunk, waiting to be freed to permit continued growth, another time it is the discovery of fresh deer tracks, or catching a new bird note that taxes one's knowledge to identify.

Upon returning from the hike—and it is not safe to sit along the route if perspiration has been worked up—a [illegible] bath, and rub, will lend the last word to bounty stimulation.

More important still in connection with road work is proper care of the feet. Well fitted roomy shoes that allow for spreading of the feet on long hikes are in order. Furthermore, it is preferable to use high shoes to prevent stones and dirt getting inside and turning of the ankles.

Before starting out, I rub vaseline over the balls of the feet, just behind the toe line. It is there that the stress and strain of walking rests. This eases the feet and prevents the harmful effect of friction—the rubbing of the sole of the foot against the shoe.

AFTER the bath a rest of fifteen minutes, with complete relaxation, lying on the back, will complete this healthful exercise.

It seems strange that more people do not take fuller advantages of walking, as this form of exercise is always at one's disposal.

Men living in large cities will get up in the morning, eat a hearty breakfast, drop down in elevators from their apartments to the street, then hop into a taxicab, subway train or trolley car to be carried to their offices.

They sit all day at desks and again ride home at 5 o'clock. After dinner, they are off to the theater again inside and slouched down in a comfortable seat.

It is no wonder [illegible] shoulders and [illegible] excuse, these urban dwellers plead lack of time. But they fail to take the advantage offered by the daily walk.

By getting up a half hour earlier in the morning, they could hike to their offices. Upon arrival their minds would be freshened and their bodies exercised.

Of course, it is more enjoyable if one has a pleasant companion for these hikes, so that conversation—mutual exchange of ideas—entertainingly vanquish time and distance.

DERBY WINNER STILL MYSTERY

Singapore, Straits Settlement, June 8 (AP)—The Straits Times today quoted W. H. Webb, an Anglo-Indian employe of a Calcutta business firm, as saying that he owned Felstead's ticket in the Calcutta sweepstakes but that he would not profit by his luck. The ticket of the Derby winner carried a prize of $1,310,000.

"Unfortunately the money does not come to me," Webb said. "I am very sorry but beyond that I cannot say any more at present."

It was believed that some friend of Webb in India would actually receive the windfall. It was thought, however, that Webb would get the customary 10 per cent commission from the actual winner.

Allah ul Allah! or, Three Cheers!

Bombay, British India, June 8 (AP)—The Evening News states that Ibrahim Dawood Kazi, a timber merchant and race horse owner here, has received a telegram from W. H. Webb, employe of a Calcutta firm, informing Kazi that he had drawn Felstead, winner of the Derby.

It is understood that Kazi purchased the ticket from Webb, which wins the great prize of $1,3[illegible].

As Sharkey and DeMave went through their preliminary exercises Johnny Indrisano of East Boston stepped up to Mr. Boston. Indrisano [illegible] as the young man who licked Joe Dundee, world [illegible] in a bout over the championship weight at the Wigwam last summer.

"[illegible] boxing?" Mr. Boston asked Indrisano, who [illegible] to have his jaw broken in a bout with Clyde Hu[illegible] last [illegible].

"[illegible]," replied Indrisano. "My jaw feels all right now but the doctors told me [illegible] until the early part of next year. So I'm figuring on getting started in February. I would have [illegible] Dundee into a title bout in New York if I hadn't run into that trouble [illegible] Hull [illegible]. I had my mouth open on account of difficulty I have breathing through my nose and Hull [illegible] me."

"WHO do you figure would give Dundee the most trouble right now?" [illegible] Mr. Boston.

"[illegible] Murphy of Lowell," came the quick reply. "Other than myself he is the only boxer in the country who can send Dundee down to defeat. I have beaten [illegible] and most of the other welterweight leaders, but I confess Murphy gave me a walloping. He is a smart boxer and a [illegible]."

"They [illegible] Murphy [illegible] in a gym bout [illegible]. I don't doubt it as he [illegible] plenty of class [illegible]."

"What would Murphy do against Al Mello?" asked Mr. Boston.

"[illegible] Mello is a puncher and aggressive but easy to hit. Murphy wouldn't have any trouble [illegible]."

"[illegible] Mello [illegible] his way of avoiding the match," said Mr. Boston. "This Murphy is a [illegible]. Mello was lucky to win a couple of close decisions over Jack Zivic while Murphy [illegible] beat the Pittsburgh [illegible]. Murphy also knocked out [illegible] more impressively than Mello did. As a featherweight, Murphy [illegible] Honeyboy Finnegan."

LADDIE LEE called time for Sharkey and DeMave and they [illegible] into action.

"Things happen rapidly in the boxing game," said Mr. Boston. "I saw Sharkey and DeMave box at the New Manhattan Club in New York less than three years ago. Sharkey only got $400 for his victory, while DeMave got $200. Since then Sharkey has made close to $[illegible] while DeMave has also been in the big money."

For three rounds Sharkey and DeMave worked at a [illegible] pace. The big [illegible] received a hand as they finished their workout.

Sharkey and DeMave will box every day this week, announced Henry Kelley.

With their workout over, Sharkey and DeMave [illegible] in New York and [illegible] done [illegible].

"You're [illegible] here," DeMave told Sharkey, "and I [illegible] Maloney [illegible] Monday night."

Johnny Indrisano looked a little bit crestfallen as he cast his eyes on DeMave. In his heart, Johnny was probably wishing he could be in there Monday night with somebody. No boxer ever got a tough or break from fate than did the East Boston youngster.

Maybe it is all in the racket, as Mr. Boston would say.

Emanuel Wins Verdict Over McTigue

New York, June 8 — Armand Emanuel, of San Francisco was [illegible] nearer a knockout as he was last night when Mike McTigue knocked him down for the count of [illegible] in the first [illegible]. But Manuel [illegible] youth and agility [illegible] overcame the [illegible] lead and won the decision over the veteran Irish battler.

McTigue after the fifth round was hardly able to stand on [illegible] feet. Not that the Coast boxer was [illegible], but [illegible] legs [illegible] and he was just able to go the distance.

Six months ago, McTigue would have [illegible] knocked [illegible] boxer out. But he is slipping fast and should retire or be retired.

FITTON C. C. SEEKS SUNDAY OPPONENT

The Fitton Catholic Club of East Boston due to an election would like to arrange game with any fast amateur semi-pro nine in Greater Boston for Sunday. Game must be played away from home. Team managers can get in touch with Manager Joseph Ando, 58 London st., East Boston, or call E. B. [illegible]-W.

BRIGHTON WILL PLAY QUINCY ON SUNDAY

The newly formed Brighton Town Team will play its first game Sunday at Rogers park. The club is being managed by "Red" Tierney and he has selected the strong West Quincy Town Team for a starter.

Want Action

The Everett Tribunes are desirous of booking games away from home Sundays and twilight. Call after 5 [illegible] Johnston, Everett 3466-W.

MALONEY STEPS TEN FAST ROUNDS

Showing more fire in his work than at any time during the past four years "Dynamite Jim" Maloney, South Boston heavyweight, indulged in a spirited 10-round workout in preparation for his important comeback battle against Jack De Mave at Braves Field next Monday night.

Two sparring partners were forced to pack up early after stopping the [illegible] right hand wallops of Maloney yesterday [illegible] faster than Hub fans ever believed [illegible].

[illegible] carried Maloney [illegible] two [illegible] rounds but [illegible] Friedman, the local heavyweight.

At [illegible] Friedman was [illegible] Maloney at the [illegible] sparring partner at the end of two rounds.

Jack Sharkey [illegible] Hub heavyweight [illegible] Jack De Mave [illegible] training session yesterday [illegible] Sharkey and [illegible] as De Mave and Sharkey [illegible].

Sharkey was [illegible] the same sort [illegible] as that used by Maloney.

De Mave's workout [illegible] Monday's show.

Mrs. Horn Advises 2 Changes in Rules

By MIRIAM BURNS HORN
Women's National Golf Champion

WITH the progress in women's golf within the last few years, the feminine stars have advanced to a point not many strokes behind the men and have lengthened their shots to where the women's par seems ridiculous.

Personally, I am not at all in favor of our par as it is now favored.

The women players (considering all the time championship players) average 200 yards off the tee, as compared with 250 yards for crack men players.

Naturally there are exceptions such as Bobby Jones and occasionally Maureen Orcutt, Virginia Van Wie, or Mrs. Harry Pressler.

Par is four from 190 to 370 yards and five from there to 500 yards. [illegible] close comparison [illegible] for a man.

[illegible] allow an extra stroke, where [illegible] additional yards a woman can still frequently "get home" with an iron and certainly a wood. It seems like we are getting a stroke leeway on any par five under 400 yards.

When a woman fails to score a man's par on [illegible], it is more [illegible] she has missed a shot, rather than inability to reach the green in the requisite number of strokes.

Just think over the holes on any course. Although the shots are longer, with only a few exceptions, a woman can play stroke for stroke, to the greens along with a man.

ELIMINATE women's par. That will necessitate the handicaps being figured on the same scale, and it will provide a relative degree of comparison between men and women players.

Brookline Golfer Is Eliminate

St. Germain-en-Laye, France, J 8—Joshua Crane, of Brook, Mass., surviving Yankee in French amateur golf tourney, was eliminated at the 19th hole in quarter final round today by T. A. Bourn of Sunningdale.

A home is man's greatest asset! Do you own yours? If not, now is the time to buy. You'll find scores of sound values listed today in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads.

—and he wonders why she said "NO!"

Could he have read her thoughts he would not have lost her. A picture of neatness herself, she detested slovenliness. And not once, but many times, she had noticed his ungartered socks crumpling down around his shoe tops. To have to apologize to her friends for a husband's careless habits was too much to ask. So she had to say "NO"—and in spite of his pleading couldn't tell him WHY.

New York—Armand Emanuel, San Francisco, defeated Mike McTigue, 10; Joe Monte, Boston, beat James J. Braddock, Jersey City, 10; Harry Ebbets, New York, technically knocked out Ollie Joyner, Orlando, Fla., 4; Jimmy Moore, Los Angeles, beat Jack Kiernan, Long Branch, N. J., 4.

Detroit—Sergt. Sammy Baker, Mitchel Field, N. Y., and Jack McCarthy, Chicago, no contest, 5; Billy Petrolle, Fargo, N. D., stopped Armand Schaekels, Belgium, 3; Arturo Schaekels, Belgium, won on a foul from Meyer Grace, Chicago, 3; Jack (Kid) Berg, England, shaded Johnny Mellow, Detroit, 6.

VARSITY CREWS HOLD TIME TRIALS

New London, June 8—The Yale varsity eight raced through two miles here today in the good time of 10 minutes, 22 seconds. They continued to row through the four-mile course, but dropped the stroke to an easy beat after the initial swift stretches.

Coach Leader sent his men 14 miles in all today, covering about the same distance as the Harvard navy.

The Crimson varsity group went over the four-mile course for time and made the down-stream row in 21 minutes, 19 seconds, which was 31 seconds faster than the time of the Yale varsity, for the same course earlier in the week, though the weather conditions at that time were not as favorable as today.

[illegible] the work of the crews, the Yale mentor being compelled to wait for an hour before his senior crew set forth on the river.

Harvard's giant crew still averages eight pounds heavier than the Yale boatmen, tipping the beam at an average of 185 pounds, while the New Haven varsity scales 177 pounds per man.

PHILLY PLAYS NEW YORK

Philadelphia and New York tennis teams will meet in the first round of the triangular Church cup competition at Longwood Cricket Club this afternoon.

[illegible] will play Boston tomorrow afternoon.

Boston has won only once, in 19[illegible] the year Dick Harte outplayed Francis T. In the match around [illegible] interest was [illegible] Miss [illegible] of [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] G. Henry Stetson, national champion in 1926, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former American and British champion, and Mrs. E. H. Baker, also furnished a close match. Mrs. Hurd managed to win 2 up.

OUTDOOR BOXING AT FORT BANKS AGAIN

Fistic fans of both sexes who in past seasons have enjoyed the summer outdoor boxing tournaments at Fort Banks, Winthrop, will see the mitt men back again at an early date and showing their pugilistic wares every Thursday night. George Dennis of this city, who in past seasons has so successfully handled the tournaments under the direction of Captain Lowrie, the athletic officer at the fort, again will be at the helm.

Though high grade fistic talent is more or less limited with the demands of the big outdoor promoters for such greater than ever, Matchmaker Dennis is confident of being able to secure what the paying sport public really wants to see, fighting figures who [illegible]

MORRIS TO TOSS TODAY AT DETROIT

Detroit, June 8—Big Ed Morris will go on the mound today for Bill Carrigan's Red Sox. The Hose will try to even up the series. Yesterday's loss was a severe setback to the upward bound Sox, as it put them down in sixth place, the Tigers going up to fifth.

A win this afternoon will shift the Sox back to fifth place and give them a chance to cinch that berth Saturday, before going to St. Louis on Sunday.

Morris is a very much feared hurler in this city. In their last stay in the Motor City Ed defeated the Tigers handily, and is out to maintain his winning record at their expense.

Tomatoes Big Help in Balancing Diet

By MARTHA LEE

Martha Lee

SOME foods are low in vitamins and yet are important for their other properties. To bolster up this deficiency you must include high vitamine foods, chief of which are tomatoes and tomato products, including the ever popular ketchup and chili sauce. White bread, low in vitamines, should be served with canned tomatoes, high vitamine food.

In sandwiches of all sorts, whether made of [illegible] which lack [illegible] whether [illegible] or fish, cream cheese, American cheese or cold [illegible] ketchup [illegible] chili sauce will [illegible] and vitamine contents.

Oysters, low [illegible] vitamines, call for a cocktail sauce of ketchup or chili sauce which is high in vitamine. Then, of course, to swing the balance further toward those vital vitamines and for savory taste, too, we want to use tomato products with many other foods such as spaghetti, peas and beans, in soups, [illegible] with scrambled eggs and [illegible].

[illegible] tomato sauce is made [illegible] of butter, [illegible] tablespoon of flour and [illegible] adding one-half cup of [illegible] one cup of hot water [illegible]

Another [illegible] sauce with canned [illegible] is made by [illegible] No. 2 can (2½ cups) of tomatoes [illegible] Then strain [illegible] with three tablespoons [illegible] with 3 [illegible] Then add [illegible] of sugar and salt and pepper [illegible]

[illegible] pepper or [illegible] slices of broiled bacon, minced or one half cup of any cooked chopped meat (beef or liver, for instance) are good additions.

Bread [illegible] mixed with ketchup or ketchup [illegible] used as a stuffing for peppers baked in a pan with [illegible] beef and basted with the beef [illegible] makes a tasty [illegible]. The peppers [illegible] topped with grated cheese [illegible] chopped nuts [illegible] to the rice with the ketchup.

Most of us are familiar with [illegible] Russian salad dressing made by adding 1/3 cup of [illegible] to 1 cup of mayonnaise dressing. A little anchovy paste gives the real Russian tang and a tablespoon of minced green peppers [illegible] or chopped pickle.

Thousand Island dressing is prepared by mixing one-half cup of chili sauce and 1 cup of mayonnaise, adding [illegible] cup of chopped stuffed olives and 1 minced hard-cooked egg.

Delicious cocktail sauce is prepared by allowing for each person 2 tablespoons of ketchup, 1 tsp of horseradish, a pinch of salt, ¼ tsp lemon juice, [illegible] paprika or cayenne [illegible] Serve in cocktail glasses [illegible]

WE'D get along a great deal better in marriage if we didn't start with the idea that we must be happy.

And that if we aren't happy some one has done us dirt.

I wonder if there's a more sentimental nation on earth than the United States of America. [illegible] the [illegible] of marriage and [illegible] of the Orient's plan [illegible] right down to [illegible] the [illegible] American dream of perpetual romance.

[illegible] mankind has gone through different stages—the stone age, the iron age, the age of bronze. We'll [illegible] here to state that America is [illegible] the [illegible] Heart Age—and I don't mean [illegible]

From [illegible] we're taught to expect Happiness as our natural right.

Successful [illegible] must be happy lives.

Successful marriages must be based on romances.

Everything in our lives proclaims this theory. The sticky infantile love stories in the magazines—the gurglings of our happy married friends, the disappointed yells of the unhappy married ones—even the sermons from the pulpits [illegible] us that life is to be one long [illegible] rosey and that True Lovers are happy forever and ever after.

[illegible] to [illegible] the honeymoon [illegible] we [illegible] And [illegible] we [illegible]

Now this is nothing [illegible] very [illegible]

No [illegible] necessary [illegible] happy. Nor is a successful [illegible]

SHE LOVES ME — SHE LOVES ME NOT

[illegible] successful. It is quite possible to [illegible] without much happiness [illegible] we married or single.

Adults [illegible] do not expect [illegible] [illegible] at [illegible] And they do not [illegible] on them if they run up against a little grief.

We are not here to be happy. We are here to grow, and all growth implies a lot of painful adjustment. And even Americans can't outsmart Fate in this respect.

The early Americans understood that fact very clearly. They were a peevish bunch in many ways but they had a lot of sense and grit and a fine dignity. They didn't go bellyaching around every time they stubbed their emotional toes. They stiffened the good old upper lip and plugged along. But we, their descendants, are apt to yell like a bunch of spoiled babies the instant anything goes wrong.

And this, I submit, is largely what ails American marriages.

important discovery!

It is now possible to cut cleaning time in half and to banish forever tiresome rubbing and polishing.

Science has freed housewives from the drudgery of cleaning time by producing a remarkable polish—Woodtone.

Woodtone cleans as easily as you dust! Just wipe it on and then wipe it off! Leaves a hard, dry, lasting lustre because it's greaseless. Won't finger-mark or catch dust. White spots and blue film vanish like magic.

Use Woodtone on furniture, floors, linoleum and woodwork. Fine for the family car, too. Makes varnished or Ducoed surfaces glisten like new.

Don't Let the Children Blame Others

By CONSTANCE CAMERON.

FOR many years I watched a man make one mistake after another; go into one field of business, and fail there then enter another, getting into deeper financial troubles as he went, and always when I asked him how he was getting on, he replied, "Oh, things are in a terrible mess! My partner was no good—" and so on without end always blaming the partner, the boss, luck, business conditions, everything under the sun, except HIMSELF.

He, being an individual who was rather unafraid to face life truthfully and without any glossing over of human conduct or motives, I never could understand why he couldn't face his own failures in the same way. It was a trait out of keeping with his other ideas of life and its problems. Until one day I saw his mother, a lovable woman whose family was right no matter what the rest of the world said or did.

Watching this man's small son stumble against a chair, fall to the floor crying, she flew to him and picked him up with all manner of tender baby-talk sympathies and slapped the chair, not once, but many times. "The bad, bad chair!" she scolded. "Grandma will slap the naughty chair for hurting baby!" Later, when the grandchild was slow in his studies at school, she remarked in his presence, "Walter doesn't get along well this year. He is as bright as any of the children, but there is something lacking with his teacher."

Then I began to understand why the man, Walter's father, never blamed himself for his failures, never looked at them squarely as results of his own mistakes, but automatically shifted the blame to the first thing or person which seemed handy at the time of the crash. From his babyhood, when he got a smart whack on the head because he hadn't paid any attention to where he was walking, it wasn't his fault. By no means—it was the fault of the bad, bad chair, and he wasn't told to be more careful where he stepped, but the long-suffering inanimate chair got the punishment. When he failed in school, it was probably the teacher's fault, as it was explained to excuse small Walter's lack of attention and application.

When baby falls and a big lump swells up, it is indeed hard to keep from running to him, cuddling him in your arms and smothering him with sympathy. It would be so much easier if we could but take all the bumps for our children, and the hardest part of a parent's job is to stand pat and say, "Get up, old fellow. It won't hurt in a few minutes. Just be a little more careful next time," but he MUST be taught to take the rough going like a good sport.

If baby falls on his first journeys across the room, don't blame the floor. Teach him to pick himself up and try again, immediately. If Sonny's team loses a baseball game, don't berate the other members of the team. Get Dad to ask him about his methods of playing. See if he did all he could toward winning. If, in college, he fails to make the athletic team because his studies were not up to the mark, don't agree with him that the rules are too strict. Calmly suggest his working a bit during the summer with a tutor, or digging a bit harder next semester.

I don't mean that you should let your child take the blame for everything that happens, but help him to learn to place it squarely and if the fault is his, to try to face it and REMEDY it. Start when he is a mere baby. It is never too early but it is often too late. Help him to help himself. Spanking the chair isn't going to do it.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

WHAT'S the TROUBLE with men? So many of them seem to love their WORK more than WOMEN! Or, rather, what's the matter with the WOMEN?

Well, most men are LAZY—and a BIG JOB is often easier to handle than many a LITTLE woman. For one thing, a man always knows his job is there WAITING for him—unless he loses it. And another thing it can't ANSWER him back.

They say no woman can serve TWO MASTERS, and perhaps it is also true that most men cannot serve two sweethearts. What we like we WORK for. What gives us a THRILL, we go after. What gives us pleasure, we seek again. Some men treat their JOBS like women they are tied to and TIRED of: they give them as little of themselves as possible, and get away from them as SOON as they can. Yet these men may treat their WIVES like other men treat a job they LOVE. You just CAN'T get them away from either.

One can never tell about MEN. The man who puts EVERYTHING into his job makes a success of his business but what about his WIFE and family. If he is never on the job at home how can he expect to make a success of MARRIAGE? Some WIVES simply have to go to work after marriage because there's so little going on at home. Others have taken up bridge or some other form of wild SPORT out of sheer DESPERATION. It's a perplexing GAME.

Of course, some women don't play the game according to RULE. In [illegible] a woman never shows her hand unless she is DUMMY. But in marriage she either shows her hand when she shouldn't, or she fails to lay her cards on the table when she should. Often she doesn't return her partner's lead, which makes him IRRITABLE. And often she trumps his best JOKE. Some women will even go so far as to make him the DUMMY—and hand him the BABY. Yet on top of all this many women expect to SCORE and take all the HONORS.

Dental Problems

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU, like all really cleanly and decent people, clean your teeth frequently. It may be once a day; or still better, on arising, then after each meal, and, finally, before retiring. On each such occasion you doubtless use either a tooth powder or a tooth paste.

In fact, the use of some such dentifrice has become almost universal, and in large measure explains the greatly improved hygiene of the mouth. It is evident that you ought to know some things about the principles underlying a practice that you have thus made a part of your daily life.

The day of the prescription dentifrice is almost past, says Dr. F. N. Doubleday, a distinguished dental authority. For one person who asks his dentist what he shall brush his teeth with, a thousand buy a proprietary powder or paste.

They do this because they like its advertisements and its taste. They do not inquire what it is made of and the information would convey nothing to them if they had it. The fact remains that dentifrice manufacturers and not dentists are the people who decide the contents of the preparation.

Pastes are now far more popular than powders, and Dr. Doubleday considers that the public's demand for a smooth preparation is being rather overdone. Smoothness may be gained at the price of cleansing power.

The prejudice against powder may date from the experiments of W. D. Miller, who showed that an abrasive powder was often very harmful to the teeth, but the modern tooth paste though free from gritty particles which could be harmful, is so smooth that it is often useless for the purpose for which it is meant.

The tubes are cleanly and convenient, but the most assiduous use of some pastes fails to whiten irregularly placed teeth, or the teeth of heavy smokers. There is little doubt that a properly compounded powder is a better tooth cleanser.

If powder is used, it should be bought in small quantities, so that it may always be fairly fresh. It is liable to lose its qualities more quickly than paste.

The ideal preparation should contain a cleansing agent such as precipitated carbonate of lime, which also has the property of neutralizing acids. Another valuable constituent is bicarbonate of soda, for it dissolves the mucus which helps to keep food particles in contact with the teeth.

As a matter of fact, an analysis made by the Lancet 10 years ago showed that most popular dentifrices actually contained these two substances.

Authorities differ about the value of soap, which forms a part of all tooth pastes. Some say there should be 25 per cent; others would limit it to 2 or 3 per cent, to avoid damage to the ferment bodies of the saliva.

"LITTLE SINS" By KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard; a Battle of Hearts Between Girls

CHAPTER 34

WHEN the mink-lined coat had disappeared from view, Dolly smiled. "Is your mother really waiting for you?"

"Indeed yes," said Bee, "—in Great Falls, Montana."

They had lunch together. Coffee and salad and a pastry for Bee. Hot chocolate and a sandwich and abundant advice for Dolly.

Bee was well qualified to give advice; she was a young woman of wide and diversified experience, and of a sophistication rather shocking, rather pitiful, in its completeness. Seven years alone in New York—she was 23 now—seven years as model, mannequin, chorus girl and movie extra, had left her no shred of illusion.

The glamour of the world, of which Dolly was so sensitive, had rubbed off entirely for Bee, long since. She saw things with sad clarity; the strings and the brass of a crooning band, the painted backdrop of a play, the tarnish on a golden gown, the dust in corners, the thorns on roses . . .

Still, she was not melancholy. She had a saving sense of humor, that substituted amusement for enchantment. Nothing was magic or romantic any more, but most things were funny. People were funny. Men especially were funny. Life and love were all right, if you didn't take them too seriously. Such was Bee's philosophy.

She found in Dolly Quinn a sense of humor equal to hers, a joie de vivre that was tonic to her, and a freshness that she wanted to cherish. "Listen," she said at the end of that first luncheon, "you need taking care of, and plenty of it. And I'm the nurse-elect—because I like you, you funny little baby."

So they lunched again together, many times. And they had long talks in the tiny apartment that Bee shared then with a gilt-haired cabaret dancer named Lorraine Allen (who was never at home). And occasionally on Saturday nights they partied, with Jerry Davis and some dapper playmate of Bee's.

And once they went together to a movie studio at Long Island City, where Dolly made her debut to the cinema as one of several hundred spectators at a wedding. (Months later she would view this film twice over, and never be able to descry herself at all.)

In January, Lorraine Allen relinquished her half interest in the apartment, and Dolly was persuaded to move and fill her place . . . until June.

"What's Lorraine leaving for?" she asked.

"For a personal maid and a Locomobile, the sap."

That was Bee. Morals she had none, gods she had none; the sensible, the smart thing, was her sole religion. In Bee's category, there were no sinners; there were only fools . . .

They Dwelt Merrily Together In the Two Small Rooms

They dwelt merrily together in the two small rooms, Dolly and Bee. Of course, they were somewhat cramped, and the rooms were always somewhat cluttered. Dolly's drawing table and implements, Bee's stack of theatrical and photoplay publications and her cigarettes and cigarette ashes, the electric percolator and toaster with which they cooked their breakfasts, the electric iron whereby they kept their frocks in press—these were much in evidence.

The single closet was [illegible] jammed with clothes, the twin beds [illegible] a multitude of boxes, the wash basin in the bathroom frequently held a pair of drowned stockings or an unarranged bouquet, and one was seldom able to gaze at oneself in any mirror without first peeling off [illegible] handkerchiefs pasted there to dry . . . But they made light of all inconveniences, joked about them to their friends and to one another, and were very insouciant and cheerful, and not nearly so uncomfortable as perhaps they sound.

She came home alone from the Art Students' League that soft May evening, riding down Fifth Avenue on the top of the swaying bus, wind in her face, peace in her whole being. She was utterly content. Everything contributed to contentment. The night. The blissful cool. The procession of gilded shop windows below, and the moving people. She felt majestic, riding here so high. This was her kingdom, those people her subjects, those windows the windows of her treasury.

Less whimsically, Dolly was happy because the portfolio she bore contained the finest drawing she had ever made, drawn that evening in the life class; and because as soon as she reached the apartment, she would begin some little sketches which Brooks Ling had suggested and which he promised to submit when finished to a magazine editor whom he personally knew.

She was happy because with the thirty-two dollars income of that [illegible] in her pocketbook, plus sundry additional dollars earned ere this and tucked away, she could tomorrow buy the moonbeam gown at Mason Mana—the gown in which she meant to be married.

She was happy that only nineteen days remained until her chosen wedding day. She was happy that Jerry loved her. And being so completely happy, she was in her subconsciousness a little sad, knowing that happiness is never complete for very long . . .

The apartment was empty when she reached it. A scrawled sheet of stationery pinned to the back of a chair in the living room explained the absence of Bee. Characteristically. "Have gone stepping with Nick," it read. "In your silver slippers, thanks. Don't wait up. Me."

Dolly unpinned the note and wadded it into a ball, smiling. Bee and Nick Standish . . . brought together first by her, and now constantly together . . .

She pulled off her hat, slipped out of her dress and into another [illegible], opened the windows and sat down before her drawing board, sighing gratefully "Now!" She adjusted paper on the board, observed that the banjo clock on the wall beside the door said eleven, disturbed her hair riotously and quite fetchingly with her fingers, and went to work.

She Looked Tired, but There Were Two Sketches Finished

Half past one found her still working. She looked tired; the floor around her was covered with pencil [illegible] and eraser crumbs; but there were two little sketches finished, exquisite, propped up on a desk near [illegible].

She pushed her chair back and rose, squaring her shoulders and stretching her arms to ease the kinks of fatigue; and for a long moment she stood surveying the two little sketches. Her expression as she faced them was a mixed one. [illegible] "The pretty [illegible]," said Dolly to Dolly. "[illegible] I know [illegible]."

Enthusiasm drove her back to the chair and the drawing board; but even such a glow of creative fervor as now possessed her could not indefinitely withstand the onslaught of physical weariness. Nor of hunger. Dolly decided, rubbing out the first tentative lines of a third little drawing, that she was hungry. Starved. She would make herself some coffee and drink it black, and then perhaps she might work an hour or so longer.

She filled the electric percolator, and connected it, and switched on the current. She found a loaf of bread and cut several wafer-thin slices to be made hot crumbly toast when the coffee was done. While she waited, she turned her back on the gay small room, with its cushions and cretonne, its parchment-shaded lamps and pictured walls, and folding her arms on the sill of one of the windows, leaned out.

The same star-speckled, balmy, velvet night. "Ummm," breathed Dolly, leaning farther. Roads away, to her left, where the avenue crossed, motor cars were flashing by, toys pulled along by the yellow reins of their headlights. Off to her right an elevated train [illegible] the two corner buildings with a [illegible]. But the street below was dim and almost deserted.

A solitary pedestrian parading a dog on a leash, a parked limousine, a few lighted windows in the apartment houses opposite, a neighboring phonograph playing Always—except for these, this whole street seemed to sleep.

Resting her chin on her folded arms, Dolly hummed softly with the phonograph:

I'll be loving you
Always
With a love that's true
Always . . . .

She wondered if Jerry was still up; if he was out somewhere, or reading late in his apartment. At 7 o'clock, when she dined with him, he had no plans for the evening. "Believe I'll go home," he said as he left her, "and smoke a pipe and think about you."

Her head drooped sideways, so that one soft cheek lay against the hand that wore his ring. Dreamily she remembered how dear, how particularly dear, he had been at dinner.

"Surprise for you, beautiful!" he had crowed the instant they met. And he had teased her, tantalized her, made her try to guess what it was. And at last he had told her. "I'm going to have the rear bedroom in the apartment fixed over into the best looking studio you ever saw for my little artist wife to work in! Going to tear out the two windows and have 'em made into one huge studio window, and Peyton's going to decorate—Pete Peyton, friend of mine, he's clever as the deuce. And I told him he might as well do the whole place over while he was about it.

"Everything's going to be done while we're in Europe, honey. I've made all the arrangements." And then for many minutes he had talked of these arrangements, [illegible] him for adoring him.

". . . Not for just an hour,
Not for just a day,
Not for just a year,
But always."

The [illegible] stopped. Dolly straightened up, [illegible] once more leaned far out, [illegible] a deep, refreshing breath.

A taxicab [illegible] she recalled [illegible] tered the toast and poured a cup of coffee. She was still humming it as she cleared magazines and ash trays from the corner of the center table and drew up a chair. She was humming it when the doorbell rang . . . Rang and rang.

Christie Brothers Planning 2-Reelers

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

CHICAGO, June 8—Chicago, with its Michigan boulevard, its Gold Coast, home of the aristocracy, and its familiar smokeless brings back hundreds of memories. Not least of these are the days I spent back stage interviewing celebrities who passed through the Windy City.

I remember Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington particularly. Perhaps because the morning mail brought me tidings from Hollywood saying that the two reeler 'Madame Behave' they made for Christie Brothers will be duplicated. Not by Julian and Ann but by a group of other players, who will make a series of short films with the intriguing title of "The Confessors of a Chorus Girl," patterned after 'Madame Behave.'

Al Christie has already closed a deal with Jean Arleolte, author of "Madame Behave" and other lively French farces. Sounds very promising.

"France has more than 500,000 cafes, bars and cabarets."

The Kansas senator, ardent prohibitionist, does not add as he might do: "The people in France and other foreigners have no crime wave and don't get drunk" except when they happen to be traveling Americans.

Whereas in this country we have more speakeasies than they have cafes in France, and the biggest crime wave the world ever saw.

Kalinin, important in the Soviet government, says the American proposals "to abolish war" are nonsense.

Russia, biggest, most powerful nation in Europe, is dangerous, in her hatred of capitalistic government.

Kalinin's utterance should make our people appreciate the importance of being prepared for war, even while you plan to abolish it.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be a June bride, having an evening church wedding, and shall thank you to help me as you have so many other girls by answering the following questions:

1—If one's father declines to "give the bride away," will it be proper for a brother (younger) to officiate in this capacity?

2—Is it a new custom for the bride to go to the altar alone, unescorted by either father or brother?

3—For a church wedding where simplicity is to be the keynote, what decoration would you suggest?

4—At a club reception would refreshments served buffet style be in order?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

YES.

2—It is possible but not desirable. I should advise you to go up to the altar on the arm of your brother or some near relative.

3—All white flowers on the altar. Calla lilies or peonies or very large roses or any large flower in June. Large forms are the most effective in decorating, and should have a background of green.

4—Yes.

North, with a singleton Spade, takes out his partner's bid of that suit with two Clubs and then with two No Trumps; but South, not requiring his partner's support in Spades, bids up to three and secures the contract.

THE PLAY

Trick 1. If the trumps fall, Declarer can make a Grand Slam provided he can bring in Dummy's Club suit. If the adverse Clubs are normally divided 4—2, two entries in Dummy will be required. Declarer therefore wins the trick with the Ace of Diamonds to utilize the King and Jack in Dummy for entries.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

By TEMPLE MANNING

POETRY plays an important part in the life of the Bedoin. And by poetry I mean not only actual verse, but the beauty of life, of nature of love. For these people are all keenly sensitized to the "finer things of life." Picture these "wild unbridled" men, wrapped in their burgouses, riding madly over the desert sands. Nothing less than murder and arson can be in their minds, you think. But listen to their voices, and be prepared for a great surprise. For it is not the plan for their raid of which they are speaking. They are reciting poetry.

The Arabs will travel for miles each contributing his verse. Not a moment elapses when one man signifies that he has finished before the next takes it up. And so they ride on, for miles and miles, singing their desert songs, in a wild sweet [illegible] and reciting their desert poems.

The coffee pot contributes much to the life of the Arabs. Never would they travel without it. The moment they pitch camp, out comes the mortar, pestle and pot, the coffee is ground, and the men sit around the camp fire.

YOUR ATTITUDE

By LUCY LOWELL

I HAVE encountered the thing which I believe is called "industrial unrest"—tracked it right into its lair. I've been hearing a lot about the "rights of the worker" and kindred subjects and I've been doing a lot of wondering.

It was the "cleaning lady"—that's what she calls herself—in a small town office building who furnished me with my new insight into the grinding ways of capital and the down-trodden status of labor.

I used to see her coming into the building a few months back. Along about 10 in the morning she would look in, run a disapproving eye over the mud-tracked and scrap-littered floor of the hallways and mutter that it was "too bad."

But some way or other she never seemed to get around to doing anything about it. She had appropriated a vacant studio and here she would isolate herself with the newspapers and a bottle of tea—she said it was tea. Thus she spent the bulk of her working hours.

Then I missed her for a time, though not unhappily, for suddenly the building began to look amazingly clean.

But she happened by a day or two ago and explained it.

"The dirty story-tellers," said she, "went to the boss and says I didn't do my work. The idea—and me slaving from morning till night! Sure he gave me the gate—a poor working-woman and him with so much money he don't know what to do with it.

"It's taught me a lesson, after this I ain't going to bother what no one thinks and I'll have more pay for my work, leave me tell you, or somebody's going to be out of luck."

Well—that's one attitude a worker may assume toward the job. Not an attitude, however, likely to lead to success.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for "Best Joke" published. Address "Best Joke," Boston Evening American.

A man applying for a driver's license was asked the question: "What part of an auto causes the most accidents?"

The reply was: "The nut that holds the steering wheel."

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MODERN man no longer regards wedding bells as a "happy ending" to a love affair; he banks on a graceful exit and a quick "curtain."

Marriage is a gamble, with this difference: If you gamble in stocks and lose, you've got nothing left; but if you gamble in marriage and lose, you've still got your "punishment" on your hands.

• • •

From nine to five, one-half the world doesn't know how its other half lives—but she has a lot of exciting guesses.

Turning a violet ray on a blonde will tell you whether she's the real thing or only a beautiful fake—but also, there is no kind of ray that will throw the same revealing light on a man's love-making!

• • •

A sick man would often get well far more quickly if he were not smothered to death by so many sympathetic women. But "feeling sorry for a man" is every normal woman's favorite way of enjoying herself!

• • •

There are two kinds of irritating husbands: Those who come home with a familiar fragrance on the breath—and those who come home with an UNfamiliar fragrance on the coat-lapel.

• • •

A man many value his wife above rubies, and even above his favorite automobile and his pet collar button—but only a good stenographer is positively invaluable.

Funny—and yet sad! But it takes seven or eight dresses, with hats and stockings to match, for a woman to keep dolled up to match a man who owns one pair of white flannel trousers.

• • •

Apparently we Americans insist upon a happy ending to everything—except matrimony.

"Mama," said Phyllis, "what do you put pictures on the wall for?"

"For you to look at, dear," said her mother.

"All right, then," replied Phyllis, "you can take them down, I've seen them."

BLOUSE TRIMMINGS

Fluttering and Flattering are the scalloped and lace-trimmed jabots, both of which types are strongly featured in the crepe de chine and georgette blouses. Somewhat longer than the overblouses of previous seasons, the most recent models are shaped to fit snugly about the hips and have narrow belts slightly below the normal waistline.

IS MONEY YOUR GOD?

By J. J. MUNDY

WHY do you make a hypocrite of yourself when in the society of men who are wealthy or even well-to-do?

Are you so anxious to win their favor that you submerge yourself or the enjoyment you might have in a social gathering in order to pay deference to them?

Do you also regulate your manner toward people by the amount of money they are supposed to possess?

If they have little, is your treatment a little less agreeable and courteous?

In fact, are you only natural and a real person when you are among those of the same financial standing?

Do you act as if you thought those with little money do not deserve any special consideration from you?

Do you assume this attitude notwithstanding the fact that you, yourself, have but little of this world's goods?

Why make money the thing to be worshipped?

There are things about men more valuable than their bank accounts, if you had sense enough to realize it.

SHOE CENTERS MORE ACTIVE

R. G. Dun Weekly Trade Review says: "The men's shoe centers on the South Shore, as well as the women's lines, report increased orders, and more activity in their plants. Upper leathers are a little more active, but most lines continue quiet. A few price advances are reported. Hides and skins are quiet, and prices are lower. Tanning materials are steady, but business is quiet. Dyestuffs are flat and chemicals are not moving very rapidly. Paints have not yet picked up.

"Contracts awarded for the week in New England amounted to $13,423,000, as compared with $9,657,000 for the same week last year. New England lumber mills continue steady, operations and prices being well maintained. Heavy building materials are moving steadily. Hardwood wholesalers are receiving a much better volume of orders at firm prices.

"The silk mills have been increasing their activities, which reached in May the highest point on record. Imports during March into the port of Boston exceeded last year's total, but the other months of the year have showed a slight shrinkage.

"There has been a fair turnover of gray goods during the week, but the sale of finished cottons has been light and the market is weak. Cotton yarns are slow, and prices are easier. Clothing has been moving slowly, and the demand for woolens has been light, allowing somewhat of an accumulation of stocks.

"Consumption of raw wool by the mills has been lessening, and activity is somewhat below that of last year. The wool market continues to be firm, and a fair amount of orders are being received, the most activity being in the medium grades. Worsted yarns are tending upwards, but there is comparatively little buying."

clares conditions fully and truly to the peddler, the public interest is not yet protected.

SOME TAKE A CHANCE

Some unprincipled venders, although fewer in number these days, make it a practice of taking a chance on buying partly decayed stock for the purposes of profitable salvage.

It is when the take-a-chance dealer commences to cut corners that trouble for the buyer begins.

You can imagine the temptation to purchase sound fruit to make a bright and pleasing "top."

Such practices are nothing more or less than a fraud on the public, and should properly be called to the attention of the authorities.

Through the vigilance of the health inspectors 3720 pounds of blighted dried up tomatoes and 350 pounds of decomposed cherries were seized from peddlers' wagons in the last two days and removed from public sale.

AUTO MERGER RUMORS ARE HEARD IN GERMANY

Auto merger rumors are heard in Germany. Merger of large automobile concerns "over there" is proposed to meet anticipated influx of cheap cars with lowering of tariff on July 1 to pre-war levels. Companies mentioned are Daimler-Benz, N. S. U. and Adler Corp. Nationale Automobile Co., Gothaer Waggonfabrik and Bayerische Motoren are also mentioned. In July, 1927, there were 723,935 motor vehicles in Germany, against 544,894 in 1926 and 119,215 in 1921.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON, JUNE 8, 1928

"Herbert Hoover Is by Far the Best and Most Popular Candidate That the Republican Party Can Nominate"

ANYONE who does not know that President Coolidge will refuse a renomination for President, even if it is offered him definitely at Kansas City, does not know the characteristic truth and honesty of the man, and does not comprehend the greatness of his patriotic purpose in declining.

There are cheap politicians, perhaps, who cannot realize that the President is incapable of such a petty political trick as stating that he would not accept the nomination and then accepting it with a show of reluctance.

But the people, as a whole, understand President Coolidge better and realize that when he refused what might have been considered as a third term, he did so for the same patriotic reasons that animated Washington and Jefferson and Madison and Monroe, and all the Fathers of the Republic, and all the great Presidents down to this day who have made similar decisions.

With all the great things that President Coolidge has done in his administration, there is no one thing that will give him a higher place in history than this high-minded and unselfish determination.

President Coolidge being, therefore, definitely out of the race for the Republican nomination, and Secretary Mellon having refused to allow his name to be used, the Hearst newspapers find the one man most capable of carrying on the principles and policies of the Coolidge administration to be Secretary Herbert C. Hoover.

The best evidence of this truth is the fact that Secretary Mellon, and indeed, as far as it is legitimate in his high position, President Coolidge are supporting the candidacy of Secretary Hoover.

Secretary Hoover is perhaps more conservative a candidate than the Hearst papers would ordinarily support for the Republican nomination; but the present situation demands conservatism, and Secretary Hoover's conservatism is of the constructive and not the reactionary type.

There is, therefore, probably no man in the whole Republican Party who would be as useful a President to the party and as valuable a President to the nation during the next four years as Secretary Hoover.

Moreover, he is unquestionably the strongest candidate, from a mere political point of view, that the Republican Party could possibly nominate.

Furthermore, his strength lies to a considerable degree in the cities, where the Democratic Party is usually strong, on account of the large elements of foreign descent resident there.

But Secretary Hoover is popular with these elements, and he will largely transfer their loyalty from the Democratic Party to the Republican Party.

Almost any Republican candidate can carry the Republican country districts, but no one, except Hoover, can display the same formidable strength in the cities, which are usually the Democratic strongholds.

The Republican Party will not only strengthen itself in this election by nominating Secretary Hoover for President, but it will strengthen itself for many elections to come by aligning these elements of foreign descent with the party, in support of a candidate whom they all admire and trust.

Happily, it was in serving his own country, the United States of America, that Secretary Hoover has made staunch friends of the citizens of foreign descent.

His constructive work abroad and his constructive work at home endear him to the hearts of American citizens of all kinds and classes.

And the appeal which this true statesman makes to his fellow citizens' fealty is not merely an appeal to the heart, but also an appeal to the mind.

Secretary Hoover is in no sense a demagogue. He makes no claptrap appeal to public passion or prejudice. He has no tricks of expression or of attire to get himself into the newspapers.

He depends on his public performances, on his acts, on his achievements, on his constructive program, on his belief that his fellow citizens have the same intelligence and understanding that he has, and will appreciate what he has done and what he plans to do in their service.

The fact that Secretary Hoover is to a degree a retiring man will not hurt him in his campaign, because this quality is due to an innate modesty; and the people like modesty in a public official and dislike and distrust a swelled head—especially when it is an empty one.

On the whole, Secretary Hoover is by far the best candidate and the most popular candidate that the Republican Party can name.

And the Republican Party cannot afford, in the light of recent disclosures, to reject a conspicuously honest, able and popular candidate, and nominate another Harding just to please the politicians.

It is the people who must be pleased in this campaign, and the people want Herbert Clark Hoover.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Snoopery Versus Freedom

Justice Brandeis States a Philosophy of Government in Words Worth Remembering

The Bill of Rights in our Federal Constitution was meant to be the people's charter of individual freedom. By it the liberties won against oppressors in a thousand years of struggle were put into the strongest guaranties that the founders of our Government could frame.

But no words could anticipate in detail all developments of the future. As Mr. Justice Brandeis points out in his masterly dissent to the majority decision of the Supreme Court in the wire-tapping case, "clauses guaranteeing to the individual protection against specific abuses of power" must, if they are to be continuously effective, "have a capacity of adaptation to a changing world."

He proceeds to state a philosophy of government in words worth remembering:

> "The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure and satisfaction of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, thoughts, emotions and sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone—the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men.
> "To protect that right, every unjustifiable intrusion by the Government upon the privacy of the individual, whatever the means employed, must be deemed a violation of the Fourth Amendment. And the use, as evidence in a criminal proceeding, of facts ascertained by such intrusion must be deemed a violation of the Fifth."

This view is, we believe, shared by a majority of law-abiding Americans. It is quite certain to receive ultimate endorsement.

GIVE A BOOK FOR COMMENCEMENT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IF you are thinking of giving a commencement present to any young person in whose career you may be interested, how about a book?

A good book, well selected, and preferably a book that you have read yourself, is the best of all gifts.

The owning of books is in itself a sort of distinction.

People may be divided, someone has said, into two classes: those who read books with covers on them and those who read magazines and newspapers.

The world is full of classic masterpieces which have been tested by time and which it would do anyone good to become acquainted with.

To give a young person such a book is distinctly to enrich his life. It is complimentary, in a way, for it implies that you think he is capable of understanding and appreciating it; that you feed his intellect somewhat more than his amusement. A gift of jewelry is all right, of course, or of clothing or some other adornment, but these appeal only to a personal desire for display.

The most beautiful thing in the world is a beautiful idea. Thoughts are things and they outlast all material possessions.

To put a young person in the possession of a compendium of serious and worth-while thoughts is to bestow upon him a lasting benefit.

Go to the book stores and prowl around, especially among the sets of classics, and select some book that you have tasted and digested yourself. With your name in it and a greeting, it will be the best kind of gift for commencement.

Do not be dismayed by the thought that your friend has many books. A book is suitable either to the rich or to the poor. Do not yield to the argument of the salesgirl who when she asked, "What are you going to give Mame for her birthday?" and was replied to by saying, "Let us give her a book," retorted, "Aw, she's got a book."

There is no such thing as having too many good books.

In almost any other kind of possession there may be embarrassment and excess, but in the bestowal of good books, useful books, there is no excess.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 8—Thoughts while strolling: Anne Nichols has bobbed her hair. Nate Collier, the artist. The singing bootblack in W. 45th st. An oil can with a potato impaling its spout. Another oil can with a movie mustache. Edna Ferber, an Appleton, Wis., girl, who made good in the city.

Few customers in the Holland tunnel sight-seeing buses. Clare Briggs getting stout. The Texas hotel clerk who took a fancy name and crashed New York society. Peter Arno, the artist, and his wife, Lois Long. The taxis with blurred back windows for neckers.

The certain way to distinguish out-of-towners—they laugh out loud. New Yorkers struggle to smile. A coal dealer named Burns, an ice cream dealer named Meltz and a tailor named Raggy. Ladies who seem to own the world, hunting for ready dinner buyers. Jim Quirk's salmon-colored roadster.

The ace of the high comediennes—Ina Claire. Young men in striped blazers who give a collegiate glamour to soda jerking. The hotel bathing pool craze hurts the tea roms. The maids in sleeveless dresses and hatless—coy and Lillian Gish-ish. Gene Markey, Chicago's Chesterfield, with a back-dip Panama.

What's become of corduroy pants? The Russian cafe where they sing nursery rhymes. Pale young men who spend their lives making combination shots. The fake jewelry auctions carry on. Robert Emmett MacAlarney. The nameless restaurant on West 42d st., near Broadway.

A window of live fish—one suggests Bud de Sylva and another Katherine Cornell. A shirt hospital. The slappity-bang of the elevated. Shadowy eyes and knowing winks. A sign painter can always attract an audience. Frederick Burr Opper, the cartoonist, who created "Happy Hooligan."

See the Lord's prayer on the head of a pin. The glum looking shills for curb hawkers. Galloping commuters. "Here y'are! What pape?" A traffic cop climbs down his tower ladder. Fifth ave. window shoppers. And the happy home-going rush of shop girls.

IT is said a good street faker with a salable gimcrack can make $10 a day profits along West 42d st. A spot near the library wall and a block in Nassau st. are the most prolific in profits for "pitches." Fifth ave. or Broadway are regarded as poor locations. A street hawker usually pays his shill $3 a day to start off sales and keep an eye peeled for a copper.

A CHAIN of restaurants discovered patrons enjoyed helping themselves from generously filled dishes waitresses brought to their tables. And at the same time the discovery that this made a large cut in expenses for kitchen helpers and those who could help themselves to as much as they pleased rarely took as much as would be served by helpers.

I AM informed there are only two straight vaudeville theaters left in America—that is, only two where vaudeville is the sole attraction. The rest are a combination of movies and vaudeville. My enthusiasm for vaudeville collapsed, not because of quality or spice, but due solely to the fact I have rarely encountered anything but snippy box-office men in vaudeville houses. There may be those who do not regard it as a high favor to sell you a seat, but I never ran across them.

ABOUT the only affable box-office man I ever met was Leonard Bergman. He is no longer a box-office man, however. He is general manager for A. L. Erlanger, one of the biggest men in the business.

I HAVE always had to whistle through my teeth, wave a handkerchief or yell "Yoo-hoo" to get the attention of a box-office man. He seems always to be talking to some person hidden off side. When he finally condescends to give me a what-is-it-worm look he reaches languidly toward the tickets and appears frightfully anoyed when I suggest I would like to know where the seats are for which I am paying my money. There seems to be something about me they don't like—perhaps it's my ears.
